Alcohol, tobacco taxes up?

It's six to one he's the dad!

LONDON (UPI) — A society beauty who didn't know which of six men fathered her baby invited all six to the christening and named the infant after all of them.

Harold Brooks-Baker, the American managing editor of Debrett's Peerage, a genealogical reference book of British aristocracy, says he attended the not-your-usual christening and was making his revelation to show how standards are changing.

The Peerage editor didn't name the society beauty or the six men but supplied some delicious hints.

She is the daughter of an English peer who is not a household name, is in her 20s, attractive and "wayward."

The six men are young, eligible bachelors from the upper middle class. One is the son of a peer.

The six stood around the baptismal font, flanking the proud and happy mother at the christening.

Each man was made a godfather and each contributed one name to the baby boy's Christian names. For a surname he was given his maternal grandmother's maiden name.

Years ago, he said, a family would have solved the unwed mother problem by silence and secrecy and sending the baby off to a nurse in Switzerland.

But times have so changed that this girl's family decided on an "aristocratic solution" — naming the child after the six men.

Mrs. Timm spends hour with her son

Times News Services

TEHRAN, Iran — The mother of hostage Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening spent nearly an hour with her son today inside the American Embassy in the first visit by a relative with any of the captives.

But in a last-minute reversal the militant captors barred Sgt. Hermening's stepfather, Kenneth Timm, from visiting the 20-year-old hostage.

Islamic Judge Sheikh Sadegh Khalkhali, meanwhile, called for the release of Hermening "to show our goodwill toward the American people."

"Everything went normally," the spokesman said when he was asked to describe the meeting with Mrs. Timm's and her son.

The Timms' attorney,, Carl Mcafee, who stayed in the hotel while the couple went inside the embassy, said he had no prior confirmation the Timms would see their son.

Militant representatives first took the Timms on a round of sites significant in the struggle against the shah's regime, including Cemetery of Martyrs.

In other developments Ayatollah Khomeini delivered a warning to resisting university students today as pitched battles continued on college campuses across Iran for the fourth successive day.

Khomeini told chanting supporters outside his home that he backs demands by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and the ruling Revolutionary Council for a shutdown of political party headquarters in universities and a purge of anti-Islamic elements.

His appeal came after bloody fighting erupted on the Tehran University campus between students and a crowd of Khomeini supporters. At least one person, a female student, was reported killed in the stone-throwing, club-swinging fray.

Iran suspended oil shipments to Japan today because of its refusal to meet Tehran's demand for higher prices, a Japanese trading company said in Tokyo.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Masayoshi Ito told reporters that Japan would dip into its 90-day stockpile.

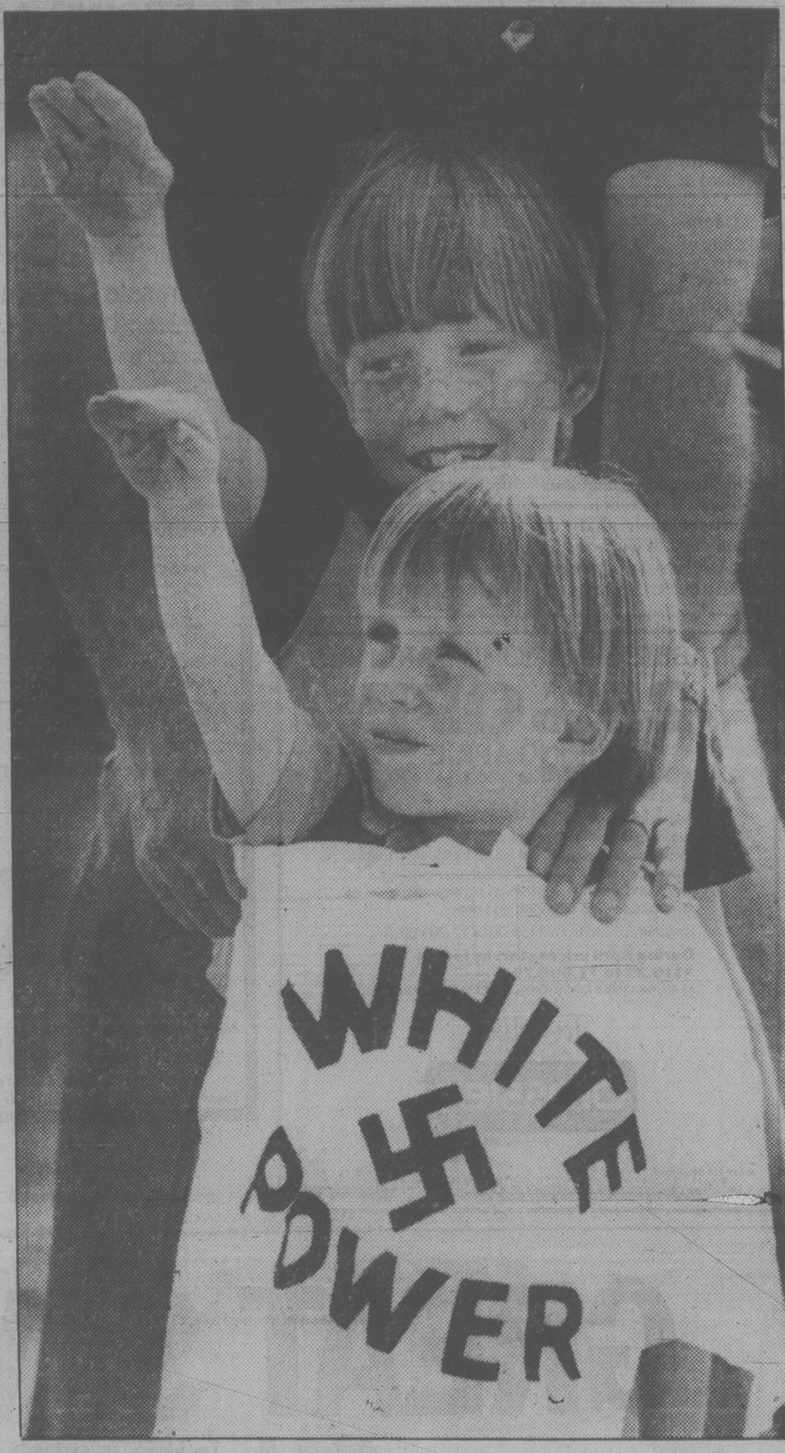
City police nab Alta. fugitive

A most-wanted fugitive — prison-breaker Kimri Arthur Edward Dial — was arrested by Victoria police Sunday night after a routine inquiry on automobile registration.

A patrol officer became curious about an unfamiliar Alberta licence plate parked at a Chambers Street address and radioed for its registered owner's name and address.

His inquiry was forwarded through the computerized Canadian Police Information Centre in Ottawa where it was listed for location in connection with a penitentiary break at Drumheller, Alta., about two weeks ago.

Police went to the door of the residence where they found Dial, one of the escapers, who had been serving a five-year sentence for assault, dangerous use of a firearm and possession of stolen property.



WHITE POWER salute is given by these two boys at a weekend North Carolina rally attended by Nazis, Ku Klux Klansmen and right-wing sympathizers. In a weekend marked by racial strife, three Klansmen were charged with shooting four black women in Tennessee and, in England, a thousand neo-Nazi National Front supporters marched through a London borough Sunday as 4,000 police stood guard. Meanwhile, in Washington, Canada's Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan says there are undoubtedly Nazi war criminals in Canada and he will try to find ways to bring them to justice (see page 36).

Turkey farmers bid to buy plant

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A majority of B.C.'s turkey farmers have agreed to put up $250,000 to buy the financially-troubled Maplewood poultry processing plant that closed Friday at Clearbrook.

The plant closed after the federal Foreign Investment Review Board disallowed sale of the company to U.S.-based Cargill Grain, which already owns Panco Poultry.

Thirty-eight of the province's 51 turkey producers met during the weekend, with 30 committing themselves to $5,000 and some to $10,000 each, to form a company to buy the Clearwood plant.

The growers plan to meet Maplewood owner Bryan Hambley Tuesday to find out if he wants to sell.

"We will then be meeting with Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt later in the week to find out how committed the government is to help any new buyer," Welch said.

Hambley said the plant would be closed for at least a week while he examined the offer. About 135 employees have been laid off.

Meanwhile, Vancouver Island egg producers are concerned the closure of the Clearbrook plant or any shift to all-turkey production will put unwanted pressure on the company's Colwood plant.

Lorne Jack, president of the 21-member V.I. Egg Producers Association, said he is worried that if there are too many chickens to be handled by the plant, egg producers will have difficulty getting rid of their spent fowl — hens that have completed their optimum egg production cycle.

"Fowl are a second-class product," Jack said, "and they get second-class treatment."

He said there are 300,000 such fowl that must be disposed of every year.

Les Guy, manager of Maplewood's plant on Sooke Road, said he isn't sure what Jack is worried about.

"Our policy has been that we pretty well kill all Island fowl," Guy said. "We haven't refused to kill any."

Excise punch expected by MacEachen tonight

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians may face higher taxes on alcohol and tobacco this week following an economic statement by Finance Minister Allan MacEachen to be made tonight in the Commons.

The finance department is refusing to call it a budget, although it is expected MacEachen will go ahead with some revenue-raising measures and other housekeeping details contained in the defeated budget of the former Conservative government.

There are also some measures still outstanding from the November, 1978, budget of former Liberal finance minister Jean Chretien.

The defeated budget of former finance minister John Crosbie raised taxes on cigarettes, alcohol and businesses in addition to the controversial four-cent-a-litre (18-cent-a-gallon) rise in the excise tax on gasoline.

Although the taxes were applied immediately, they were rescinded because of the defeat of the budget and dissolution of Parliament for the Feb. 18 election.

The Liberals promised during the election campaign the gasoline excise tax would not be raised, but they made no promises regarding other tax increases.

The higher tobacco taxes — about 2.7 cents more on a package of 20 cigarettes — would raise about $85 million this year.

Higher alcohol taxes — about one cent on a bottle of beer, 11 cents on spirits and 13 cents on wines — would have raised $130 million this year.

A temporary five-per-cent corporate surtax until the end of 1981 was estimated to raise $370 million this year and $510 million next year.

The government is looking for new ways to raise more revenue mainly because higher costs of subsidizing imported oil have pushed the deficit well beyond the $11.3 billion originally forecast last year.

MacEachen's 3,300-word statement, his first formal announcement since getting the portfolio, is expected to make projections on such things as economic growth and the government's spending deficit this year.

The announcement was timed to come a day before the release of spending estimates for the year ending March, 1981.

Release of these figures is about two months behind schedule because of the Feb. 18 election.

RCMP tricksters may be revealed

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan said Monday he would consider giving the names of RCMP officers involved in possibly illegal dirty tricks if asked for them by provincial attorneys-general.

(See earlier RCMP tricks story page 40.)

The minister told reporters he has advised the attorneys-general of British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec that disruptive operations described in transcripts of testimony taken by the McDonald commission into RCMP wrongdoing occurred in their provinces.

He told his provincial counterparts of the transcripts in advance of their release Sunday. Most identifying details were removed from the edited transcripts given the press.

Attorneys-general would be responsible for laying charges against any officers who broke the law while participating in the dirty tricks campaign conducted by the RCMP security forces in the 1970s.

The transcripts revealed such tricks as filing a phoney income tax return, sabotaging a car and making threatening telephone calls.

Kaplan said charges that might result should wait for the McDonald Commission's report. The report is expected to include recommendations on whether disciplinary action should be taken against officers who broke the law. It is expected by the end of the summer, he said.

In another announcement, Kaplan said Monday he has ordered a review to determine how much abuse there is in the parole system.

L.A. Games for sure

Times News Services

The International Olympic Committee will support holding the 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles whatever the outcome of the U.S.-inspired boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

IOC President Lord Killanin Sunday in Geneva downplayed speculation that the U.S. withdrawal from the Moscow Olympics on President Carter's orders would lead the IOC to suspend the U.S. Olympic Committee for bowing to political pressure. Such a suspension would automatically invalidate the contract for the 1984 Games.

Several members of the Moscow Organizing Committee have said in recent weeks that Los Angeles risked losing the Games because of the U.S. boycott drive.

And the Soviet Union was expected to open a campaign today to have the U.S. Olympic Committee suspended from the Olym-

BCRIC eyes total control of CanCel

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. announced plans Sunday to offer to purchase all of the publicly-held common shares of Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., a B.C.-based pulp and lumber producer.

BCRIC president David Helliwell said the corporation will pay $15 for each of the approximately 2.4 million publicly-held shares which closed Friday on the Toronto Stock Exchange at $10.12. BCRIC currently owns 81 per cent of CanCel's shares.

TSE trading in shares of BCRIC and CanCel, was halted at the opening and resumed at 1 p.m. EST. BCRIC shares gained ¼ to $6⅝ on 58,000 shares and Canadian Cellulose jumped 4 to $14⅛ on 700 shares.

Helliwell expects the offer will be mailed in early May and will be conditional upon obtaining at least 90 per cent of the outstanding shares.

"We believe the price being offered is appropriate both for BCRIC and for the other CanCel shareholders," he said. "We have engaged an independent valuation which supports $15 as a fair price for the CanCel shareholders.

"From BCRIC's standpoint, obtaining 100-per-cent ownership of CanCel is consistent with our operating company objectives. It will complement our 100-per-cent ownership of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills and enable us to undertake an effective rationalization and integration of these operations, particularly in terms of the available forest resource."

Helliwell said the offer will also allow CanCel to accelerate plans for a major expansion of its Castlegar pulp mill which might otherwise be delayed because of limited financing options.

CanCel president Donald Watson said his initial reaction to the offer is positive.

Watson said CanCel's board of directors will formally consider the offer as soon as possible after it is made. He also said the company's annual shareholders' meeting will be held April 25 in Vancouver as previously scheduled.

BCRIC recently purchased 14 per cent of the shares of forest giant MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. for $35 a share and took an option on 25 per cent of the shares of Kaiser Resources Ltd.

ESTABLISHING BRIDGEHEAD in Esquimalt this morning, crewman Kevon O'Neill of New Zealand frigate HMNZS Otago immediately set up a lantern-equipped kisbey ring on the jetty. Otago's 240 officers and men will be here for a rest until Thursday when they leave for Vancouver, returning to Esquimalt May 1 to 5. The Whitney class frigate, commanded by Cmdr. Jack Welch, took part in the recent international Rimpac 80 exercise off Hawaii. (Bill Halkett photo).

Vancouver lawyers' concerns about possible changes in the way accident victims receive compensation are premature, a spokesman for the Insurance Corp. of B.C. said today.

Bev Penhall was commenting on statements last week by members of the Trial Lawyers Association of B.C. that ICBC was considering a proposal that would make it more difficult for accident victims to obtain lawyers and ultimately limit their civil rights.

The alleged proposal the lawyers referred to would allow ICBC, after a court judgment in an accident case, to apply to the court for compensation to be paid in monthly instalments rather than as a lump sum.

This would turn the system into a kind of Workers' Compensation Board type of scheme and in some cases mean a victim wouldn't have enough money to hire a lawyer, they said.

However, Penhall said that system, which exists in other places, is only one of many being studied by a broad-based committee set up a year ago.

The committee, representing ICBC staff, independent insurance people and adjusters as well as the Consumers Association of Canada, is charged with the responsibility of assessing the fairest method possible for rewarding everyone injured in car accidents.

Penhall mentioned some inequities in the present system including:

— cases where those with similar kinds of injuries suffered in different accidents receive significantly different awards from the court.

— someone injured in an accident is found liable in the courts and therefore receives no compensation for future problems, like inability to work.

The so-called scheduled payment of money from a court award is used in some areas because it prevents people not used to handling large sums of money from spending a lump sum very quickly, he said.

Penhall said the committee's job is a complicated, long-term one. It is possible an interim report could be ready by the end of the year.

The committee may not end up proposing one system but may just present the alternatives or suggest a composite of a number of systems, he said.

Victoria Grits spurn allegations of laziness

Victoria-area Liberals said today Senator Ray Perrault's weekend criticism of party workers doesn't apply to them — they've been hard at work reorganizing for a year now.

Perrault, the province's only representative in the federal cabinet, Sunday tore a strip off B.C. Liberals for not working hard enough to elect members to the House of Commons.

"In some areas, executives of this party involve five or six people who go through the motions and hold meetings once every so often," he told a meeting of North Vancouver Liberals.

"That description sure doesn't describe our association," said Gerry Kristianson, who was the party's candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich in the federal election and until recently the riding association president.

Irma Dunn, vice-president for the southern Island on the provincial association, said the Victoria association established a storefront office at 1121 Vancouver last December, something Perrault recommended in his weekend speech.

"We're quite amazed at the numbers of people who are coming in off the street," she said.

Volunteers now coming to the party are staying to organize between elections, which wasn't the case in the past.

"I've been in the party a long time and there are new people coming in who are willing to work. There are numbers of them this time and I'm quite hopeful."

"If executives are not operating, get rid of them," Perrault told about 60 Liberals Sunday. "If there's no production, let's change it. I know the people here are loyal Liberal workers. But there are not enough of us.

"We will elect Liberals in numbers when we deserve to elect them. Let's not be coy about it — the party does need help," said Perrault.

Kristianson said Sen. Keith Davey, a key adviser to Prime Minister Trudeau, was in B.C. recently for a post-election debriefing of candidates and he also had harsh words.

"He was very critical of what he called letterhead Liberals," he said.

They are party members who angle for executive positions in riding groups because they figure it's a personal advantage but don't do any real work for the party, Kristianson said.

Davey told the candidates Liberals must be willing to work between elections, like the New Democratic Party.

Paul McKivett, newly-elected president of the Esquimalt-Saanich Liberals, said party members haven't been idle since their poor showings in the 1979 and 1980 federal elections.

"We are fairly well-organized over here," he said.

"I think we've just gone ahead and done it," said Dunn, pointing to the new office and establishment of a Liberal association on Salt Spring Island, where the party had never been organized before.

Kristianson said he thought Perrault's criticism probably was true of some Liberal groups in the province, but not in Victoria.

Wildcat ends in Cranbrook

CRANBROOK (CP) — More than 100 miners who walked off the job Saturday in a wildcat strike at the Fording Coal operation near the East Kootenay community of Elkford are back on the job.

The workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America, went back at midnight Sunday night after meetings with management. The walkout followed union complaints of unsafe equipment.

A company spokesman said the walkout had nothing to do with safety. Instead, three workers were trying to get back at Fording for personal reasons.

A union official said the three workers identified by the company as instigators of the walkout will be suspended pending an arbitrator's decision.

Can halt baldness Finnish scientists say

LONDON — Two Finnish scientists said they have developed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The claim, however, was greeted with initial reservation by some medical experts.

The product contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hairs and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

Communists eye gains

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. communists were told Saturday they should become more involved in municipal politics because this is where they have the best chance of being elected.

"The role of the party is obviously decisive," Bruce Yorke told the biennial B.C. provincial convention of the Communist Party of Canada.

Yorke presented a motion calling on the incoming provincial committee of the party to initiate a systematic review of party activity in muncipal politics to make "additional assignment of forces to this vital field of work" with emphasis on selection and promotion of candidates

The 100 delegates spent most of Saturday discussing a 33-page document on a new economic strategy for B.C. prepared for the convention by the party.

Principal thrust is aimed at challenging what the party says is a monopoly control of B.C. resources by multi-national corporations.

"The bankruptcy of the economic policies of the federal and provincial governments is demonstrated most dramatically in the housing crisis facing Vancouver and major B.C. centres," provincial party leader Maurice Rush said in his keynote address

UIC maze sparks benefits dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — An unemployed carpenter on welfare is being hammered by the Unemployment Insurance Commission for $2,500 the commission says it overpaid him in benefits.

But the carpenter, who refuses to be named for fear of reprisals, and his union maintain he was entitled to the benefits.

Union business agent Colin Snell said Saturday he spends half his time helping members of his local with UIC claims. He said many claims are botched because the regulations are extremely complicated.

"Even senior officials in the UIC are confused about them," he said.

He said the carpenter, unable to find work in the B.C. Interior where he lives, left his wife and children to work in Vancouver for three months until he was laid off.

Believing he had 11 weeks' work to his credit, the carpenter returned home to find he really needed 12 weeks there because the number of weeks needed to qualify varies from region to region. In Vancouver he needed only 10 weeks.

Two weeks later, said Snell, the carpenter received a call from the local unemployment office saying the requirement in his region had dropped to 11 weeks and he could collect his benefits.

Then in December, when he was able to find work, the commission audited his file and ruled he only had 10 weeks of work to his credit, so he owed the commission the $2,500 it had paid him during the five months he was unemployed.

Snell said he reviewed the claim and convinced UIC officials the carpenter had the necessary 11 weeks and "they agreed."

But the decision has been reversed, and both men are awaiting an appeal.

Snell said one complication is the difference between the calandar week and the payroll week.

He said tradesmen often do three weeks' work in two weeks, pay unemployment insurance for the three weeks, but are credited only for the two.

Another problem, he said, is that tradesmen often work for two or three employers in one week, but unless they work a minimum of 20 hours for each that week, they don't get credit for the hours worked.

Allan MacLean, a lawyer handling UIC appeals for the Vancouver Community Legal Assistance group, said the regulations are needlessly complicated.

Yvon Charlebois, executive director of the UIC program in Ottawa, said most of the difficulties stem from inaccurate figures submitted to the commission by the 400,000 employers.

Charlebois denied there is widespread disparity in the rulings made by the UIC staff.

He said the regulations cannot be less complicated because the law itself is complicated.

Warning signals

The progress of the Reid site convention centre is looking remarkably like a runaway locomotive, careering full-speed along narrow rails oblivious to warning signals of trouble on the tracks ahead.

From the beginning, the procedures concerning the centre to fruition have been questionable. The project will be built on public land with public money, but most of the decisions have been made behind closed doors by the Provincial Capital Commission, a creature of the provincial government, and by the Pan-Pacific Society, a well-intentioned group of Victoria businessmen.

Victoria council has occasionally been allowed a glimpse of what was going on — enough to persuade its members to promise a little money. At no time have city residents been given a forum to express their views on the site or financing of the centre. Even the design of the building was presented as a fait accompli. The usual practice of inviting architects to submit plans and tenders was ignored.

These procedures led directly to two results: first, the proponents of the centre (the PCC, Pan-Pacific, Mayor Bill Tindall and some aldermen) became convinced that their proposal would gain all necessary approvals speedily and easily. Second, some members of the public became concerned and angry and began to protest in earnest.

A clash was inevitable. The centre's advocates now seem to consider the eleventh-hour interventions by Ald. Robin Blencoe and other protesters some sort of act of bad faith. They are determined that their project will not be slowed down, let alone stopped.

The first sign came last Tuesday night when the advisory planning commission used a technicality to ensure that the general public did not speak at an informal hearing on the necessary rezoning to accommodate the centre. As a result, the commission heard a lengthy litany of praise in its favor — all from the business community.

Of even more concern, however, was Mayor Tindall's reaction Friday to a report from city solicitor Jakob de Villiers about the legal problems the city is facing with the centre. The idea of the report had come from Blencoe a week earlier, and had been endorsed by council.

De Villiers, a legal expert on the Municipal Act, had discovered a number of serious difficulties that the city would have in supporting the centre within the constraints of the act. He had outlined those problems clearly and concisely.

He noted that the act restricts municipalities from committing future councils to expenditures, so that it would be difficult for the 1980 council to offer a permanent commitment to pick up half the centre's operating deficit. He noted that details of the building and operation of the accompanying parkade had not been clearly worked out. He noted that difficulties would arise concerning the payment of municipal and school taxes by the Pan-Pacific Society.

Tindall dismissed the report out of hand, insisting there were no serious legal problems despite de Villiers' findings. He said there are many ways around the difficulties the city solicitor outlined.

The mayor may or may not be right, but he is not a lawyer. He does not have the expertise of de Villiers in these matters. He must know that city council cannot possibly go ahead with its plans for supporting the centre without sorting out the issues raised by the solicitor.

The mayor appears determined to keep the plans moving ahead, regardless of warning signals, but he and his colleagues should recognize the situation they are creating. Public opinion may be unreasonable if it is stifled until the rezoning finally reaches the stage of a formal public hearing. Ignoring legal advice can lead to injunctions, lawsuits, writs and other major problems later on.

Mayor Tindall and the city's businessmen want a convention centre. We suspect that most Victorians share that goal. The city is increasingly depending on tourism for its economic well-being, and a convention centre could be an important part of future prosperity.

That does not mean, however, that the Reid site is the right location. Are other alternatives available and better suited? What about the financing? Will the centre's design enhance the city?

Perhaps Mayor Tindall and the group supporting him have satisfactory answers. If not, why not discuss them with the people?

BRUCE HUTCHISON

New diagnosis for petty ills

Some two centuries ago Dr. Samuel Johnson declared that patriotism was the last refuge of scoundrels. If he were alive today he might conclude that a patriotic modern society's last refuge is serious thought about its own condition. It prefers almost any ordeal to the awful prospect of facing the contemporary facts too complex, too changeable, too frightening for candid examination.

Even the capacious mind of London's great sage must reel before the whirling kaleidoscope and fever chart of our time. But perhaps James Boswell, the diligent diarist, would have noted certain news items during a single recent fornight and suspected that the human species, in Canada at least, was losing its wits.

Nation crumbling

After three years of exhaustive research, the prestigious C. D. Howe Institute reports that the Canadian state is rapidly disintegrating, not only because the Quebec separatists want to destroy it but because the other provinces are becoming equally restive — this, mind you, in the world's luckiest nation.

If the institute is right — which I don't believe for a moment — we need more than sound government, now lacking. We need a psychiatrist to examine our heads.

Exhibit two is a speech in Canada by James Callaghan, once the socialist prime minister of Britain. He fears that the entire world economy may disintegrate and reproduce the madness of the 1930s, every nation cowering in its own little storm cellar of autarchy, behind flimsy tariff walls, prostrate and destitute. Such, as he sees it, is the landscape of the Big Seven's next summit meeting in Venice.

A statesman can afford to be frank in the opposition benches — a luxury often denied to the leader in office — and so is Mr. Callaghan's Conservative predecessor, Edward Heath.

As exhibit three, he warns the rich nations, the so-called North, that the poor of the South are desperate and dangerous; that they may default on their huge debts, precipitating a general disaster; that the world population will increase by two billion in the next 20 years; and that the mind boggles at the problem of feeding, housing, and merely keeping alive those extra human beings.

The fourth exhibit supports Mr. Heath's warning. In Washington the state department says that the nation of Cambodia faces quick "extinction," its five million inhabitants mass starvation — a fact that we Canadians might remember when we bemoan our hard times over a restaurant meal costing a month's pay in Southeast Asia.

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . did he hear Carter?

We could also remember a fifth exhibit largely forgotten in the torrent of the day's news.

Though Jimmy Carter seems overwhelmed by the impossible job of the American presidency, he occasionally utters common sense. Addressing his nation's allies, he says: "Some ask for protection but are wary of the obligations of alliance. Nations ask for leadership; at the same time they demand independence of action. They ask for understanding yet often decline to understand us in return."

Did Prime Minister Trudeau hear and heed that message from the White House? Did he recall his famous description of Canada as a mouse living beside an elephant? Does he realize that the elephant, wounded by its own mistakes and those of its friends, is still the only power able to defend us all?

Leaving aside the familiar, innumerable, and contradictory economic prophesies baffling even the prophets, some minor exhibits could be added to the list of a single fortnight.

The Bank of Montreal finds that the expertise of Canada's work force is improving but enjoys the "dubious honor of having the worst strike record in the industrialized world."

In Ottawa the federal government plans the rescue of the Chrysler corporation which, despite all the imagined "economies of scale," refused to make a sensible car.

In Victoria, to cite a comic B.C. exhibit, the Bennett government thinks of building a tunnel under Georgia Strait, or a bridge across it. But, wallowing in budgetary surplus, cannot build a workable urban transportation system in a Vancouver bursting at the seams.

Dirty tricks

As a final British Columbia exhibit observe the shabby political cynicism of the New Democratic Party Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition holds up the public business and refuses the normal courtesy, or decency, of parliamentary pairs in the hope of a snap midnight vote to defeat the government — this while David Barrett, idol of visiting columnists from Toronto, deplores dirty tricks.

It was Dr. Johnson who said that "when a man knows he is to be hanged in a fortnight it concentrates his mind wonderfully." But in our time he surely would not say that the Canadian mind, with the last fortnight's exhibits on display, is yet sufficiently concentrated for its imperative needs. Any competent psychiatrist might pronounce a more alarming diagnosis.

WALTER STEWART

Setting the record straight

OTTAWA — Hansard lies.

The official report of Parliament is supposed to contain an accurate transcription of everything that is said in the House of Commons loud enough for the Hansard reporters to catch.

But it doesn't.

Long before Canadians get to see the official record, it is cleaned up, smoothed over and altered into something suitable for family reading.

MPs — and senators, too, for that matter — are allowed to "correct" the record that first appears as a typewritten transcript ready for the printer.

Rewriting history

But the rot only begins there. In "correcting" their copy, the parliamentarians are allowed considerable latitude. In theory, they are only supposed to change minor errors — a chap says North when he means South, for example. What harm could it do to set that right?

From that simple, sensible beginning, however, has evolved a system in which a certain amount of creative fiddling takes place.

Someone rises and fires off something like this: "Ahm. Madam Speaker, I , uh, my, um, ugh, question. My question is ulp, for, oh, ah, the, er, Prime Minister. What, um, does he, cough, cough, mean to, snort, do about it"?

That will come out:"Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. What does he intend to do about this horrendous problem of inflation?":

Remember Prime Minister Trudeau's famous "Fuddle Duddle"? It is now an established fact that he didn't say "Fuddle Duddle" at all. What he said — I was there — was, "Forsooth." How that came out "Fuddle Duddle" is one of those enduring mysteries, like how they put the gooey stuff inside a Caramilk bar.

Not content to allow the parliamentarians to fudge the record, Hansard does so on its own behalf. For instance, when the Prime Minister, or some other august personage, draws an over-long bow during a speech, it is customary for the troops opposite to give him the raspberry. This comes out on the official record this way:

"Some hon. Members: Oh, oh."

Pack of lies.

What they actually said was:

"An hon. Member: Ah, shut up.

Another hon. Member: Sez who?

Yet Another hon. Member: Play it on your kazoo."

The authorities have decided — as authorities will — to protect Canadians from the fact that the level of wit in Parliament rivals the talk around a water-cooler in one of the nation's grubbier detention centres.

"Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh", reads as if it might conceal some witty, but ribald, remarks.

Fat chance.

The thrust and parry of debate — as it is always called — in today's House of Commons has about as much zip as a funeral-home brochure.

On Tuesday, the first day of the Throne Speech debate, there was an exchange of barbs between John Crosbie, the former minister of finance, and Allan MacEachen, the current incumbent. Both are known for their brilliant, ascerbic styles. Their duel began with Crosbie hoping that MacEachen would "copy me in all that he does. If he does, then he will serve his country well."

"Some hon. Members: Hear, hear." (Which is not what they said, of course.)

MacEachen's riposte went like this:

"Madam Speaker, I know that the hon. gentleman will be a model to me, but one aspect of his career that I will not follow is to have my first budget defeated by the House of Commons."

"Some hon. Members: Hear, hear."

"An hon Member: Bring one in."

That's it, folks, two of the brilliant debaters in Parliament, at the top of their rollicking form, aided and abetted by a cast of hundreds.

Funny lines

The last really funny line to come out of the House of Commons emerged last Dec. 13 from the lips of (then) Tory House Leader Walter Baker when he said, "Beginning next week we will commence third reading of Bill C-20." That was like Joan of Arc talking about what she intended to do after the barbecue. There was no next week for that Parliament, and no Bill C-20.

And when the House did go up in smoke on Dec.14, and the hon. Members were cat-calling across the chamber with remarks, doubts and questions about each other's ancestry, honesty and sexual proclivities, how do you think Hansard got it down?

Right.

"Some hon. Members: Oh, oh."

If Hansard is going to continue fooling with the facts — and it is — maybe they should bring in a few comedy writers, to brush this stuff up.

Either make it more accurate, or funnier.

Victoria Landmarks

In the Capital Region the arbutus and dogwood are familiar trees. Their scientific names and the men they honor are perhaps less familiar.

Arbutus menziesii honors Captain Vancouver's official naturalist, Archibald Menzie who, seeing the arbutus in the present state of Washington, noted in his Journal on May 2, 1792, that it was "a peculiar ornament to the forest by its large clusters of whitish flowers and ever green leaves."

Cornus nuttuallii, the specific name of the dogwood that is our provincial floral emblem and protected by law since 1936, commemorates Thomas Nuttall (1786-1859). Thomas Nuttall, son of a Lancashire printer, was apprenticed as a printer, emigrated, at age 21, to Philadelphia and became interested in botany. His botanical journeys in unexplored parts of the American territories were marked by great hardships and privation.

From 1822-33 he was curator of Harvard University's Botanical Garden. Then he travelled to the far west, reaching Fort Vancouver in 1834. There he realized that the Pacific dogwood was a separate species and that its berries were food for band-tailed pigeons. Thus Audubon was the first to publish a description of "a superb new species of dogwood, discovered by our learned friend, Thomas Nuttall — which I have graced with his name."

Federal field

With such expressions as "a slap in the face" and "extremely upset" it is obvious that Premier Bennett was all steamed up over the refusal of Governor Bouey of the Bank of Canada to attend the western premiers' conference. When he simmers down a bit it is hoped that he may reconsider his attitude and realize that Bouey has no choice in the matter. After all, his responsibility is solely to the government and Parliament of Canada.

There are a number of grey areas in the BNA Act, where it is sometimes difficult to determine who has the power to do what, but this is not one of them. Banking, incorporation of banks, issue of paper money, currencey, coinage and interest, all come under federal jurisdiction (Sect. 91), so their control in this area is absolute. While the premiers may offer suggestions and advice to the government of Canada, as anyone can, they have no say in the making of policy.

As premier of B.C. Bill Bennett has a difficult and very important job to do. That should be enough for any man to have on his plate and it would be all the better accomplished if he could be persuaded to refrain from trying to help run the federal government as well. The latter should look to parliament for advice and guidance, not to provincial governments, for if the present trend is allowed to continue, the powers of parliament will be so eroded as to prevent having such a thing as a national economy. And without one, how can ten little principalities compete in this world?

In spite of supporting Bouey's stand in this instance, it should not be thought that I favor present high rates of interest. They consitute a grave danger to the country and are grossly unfair to the lower income group. Interest payments are mostly paid to those who have a surplus, but are paid by others who need to borrow enough to pay their debts. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Keep Glenshiel

Why, in the name of commonsense, is there a plan to destroy a potentially valuable landmark building like the Glenshiel Hotel? First, consider the immediate hotel needs of Victoria. While we are being asked to open our homes to tourists, there are now, I hope temporarily, 24 empty rooms in the Glenshiel. True, it's not the Empress, but it's clean, convenient, inexpensive, and as safe as most houses.

Secondly, looking at the long term, I am considering the housing needs of Victoria residents. For a mere $500,000 — peanuts to a government contemplating expenditures of billions for an unnecessary sports centre, and an even less necessary tunnel-bridge to the mainland — this old, small hotel could be renovated to the proper safety standards and to attractive decor, to remain a home for a large group of elderly people. These residents are capable of looking after themselves and of enjoying their nearness to parks, harbor, and downtown. They leave houses and apartments which they can no longer manage themselves, thus freeing units in the supersaturated housing condition now obtaining in Greater Victoria. At this moment, a sufficient number of applications for residence are on hand to fill the place.

Renovations could be done gradually without dislodging anyone, and, in fact, there are volunteers ready and willing to paint and repair where amateurs could do the work.

We are sadly lacking in suitable accommodation for old people at all levels of physical and mental competence. Here is one building that could be made to supply a home where nursing staff is not needed, but where the devoted staff already in place make it a pleasant place to live.

We need the Glenshiel. — K. M. Christie, 2066 Newton Street.

Recycle

I recently read a tiny article in the Times concerning a move in Alberta to have juice containers recycled through a deposit system.

I think that we should move even further in this direction.

I propose that reusable standardized containers be used throughout the entire food and beverage industry wherever possible. Where this is not possible, deposits and recyclable containers should be used. Also there should be incentives for retailers to market bulk goods.

Every bag, box, jar, can or bottle that is thrown away is a waste of human, natural, and energy resources, and is part of a force that alienates us from nature. — Robert Allen, Victoria.

On shibboleths

"Gimme an 'O'!" shouts the Ohio State cheerleader, and the fans roar back with an "O." The name of the state is rousingly spelled out and the cheer concludes: "O,H,I,O — Ahia!"

"Ahia" is how you pronounce Ohio if you come from that state, according to Charles Stough of The Dayton Daily News. He adds that Versailles is pronounced "Ver-SALES," (strange — Kentuckians call their Versailles "Ver-SAWLS"), New Bremen is "New BREE-men," Cadiz is "CAD-dis" and Houston, Ohio, is called "HOW-ston" by the local people. (The last will come as no surprise to New Yorkers, who have been calling Houston Street "HOW-ston" for centuries, and wonder why Texans prefer "HYOO-ston.")

We are talking here of shibboleths, those passwords that signal who is a native and who an outlander. "Shibboleth," the Hebrew word for "stream," was used by the soldiers of Gilead to separate their neighbors from the Ephraimites, who pronounced the "sh" as an "s"; because they couldn't get it right, according to Judges 12:6, 42,000 Ephraimites were slain. In those days, pronunciation meant something.

If an American city is named after a foreign city, chances are it is pronounced differently. In Minnesota, Montevideo is "Montevi-DEE-oh," not "Montivid-DAY-oh." In Idaho, it's "Mos-coh," never "Mos-cow." Sample the Wienerbrot in "VY-enna," not Vienna, Ga., and try the pasta in "MY-lan," which is the way they pronounce Milan in Ahia. In South America, Lima, Peru, may be "LEE-ma, Per-OO," but in Ohio, it's "LY-ma," and in Indiana, it's "PEE-ru." Similarly, say "CAY-ro," not Cairo, Ill.; "New BURR-lin," not New Berlin, Pa., and "Del-high," N.Y., not "Del-hee," as in India's New Delhi.

If you're in Quincy, Mass., and don't pronounce it "Kwin-zee," get out of town. Newark, Ohio, is pronounced "Nerk," and Newark, Del., is pronounced with two syllables — "NEW-ark" — which residents of Newark, N.J., think is hilarious, because they know it should be "Noork." In Oregon (the outsiders say "Ore-gone" and the insiders say "Ory-gun"), my colleague Jack Rosenthal instructs, "the fertile northwest part of the state is organized around not the 'Will-a-METTE Valley,' but the 'Will-AM-ette Valley' — rhymes with 'dammit.'"

Hoosiers, reports Don Wigal ("WHY-gul") from Indianapolis, say "In-yuh-napplus," or simply "Naplus," while tourists insist on six syllables. Scores of readers point to Louisville, Ky., which is "Looie-ville" only to outsiders — residents call it "Lou-a-ville," or more often just "Louvul." Nor does anyone meet you in St. Looie, Louis — the pronunciation of that town is Anglicized to "Saint Lewis."

Outsiders get on local nerves with "Frisco" for San Francisco, "Chi" for Chicago ("Chi-CAW-go" if you were born there, "Chi-CAH-go" if you moved in), and local teeth are set on edge by "San Antone" for San Antonio. Curiously, people from Cincinnati, who call their city "Cincinna-tuh," take no umbrage at "Cincy."

The most thunderously mispronounced city names are Miami, New Orleans and Baltimore. To Miamians, the Tamiami Trail goes through "Miamuh"; tourists call it "Miam-me." The saints go marching in to "Noo-OR-luns," or "Nawlins," while jazzy tourists come marching in to "N00 Or-LEENS." Marylanders live in "Ballimer," while the rest of us are suited to a tee by Bal-ti-more. (Whence "to a tee"?)

Donald E. Schlesinger of New York, a French teacher, has discovered a difference in the sound of clicking dice in Las Vegas, Nev.: "As a frequent visitor to that town, I can vouch for the fact that the universal native pronunciation is 'Loss Vaygus, Ne-VAD-da,' whereas outlanders tend to say 'Lahs Vaygus, Ne-VAH-da.' It has always surprised me that they pronounce the 'Las' as if it were the same as 'Los' (Angeles, for example); but I assure you that, particularly on television, they do."

Students of Jeffersoniana travel to Monticello, Va., pronounced with a "ch" by visitors and with an "s" by townfolk; in Monticello, N.Y., it's the other way around. With determined inconsistency, Iowans call Des Moines "Duh Moynes," but Des Plaines "Dess Plains." And a person traveling from Lancaster, N.Y., to Lancaster, Pa., would go from "Lane-caster" to "Lank-ster."

The correct pronunciation is the local choice. In Great Britain, Chalmondelay is "Chumley"; to pronounce it the way it looks is the mark of the uninformed. Obeisance to local "ignorance" may distress New York City students who attend the State University at Binghamton, and hear the locals call the street named Beethovan "Bay-THO-van" and Goethe Street called "Go-thee," but — reports Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan's aide Timothy Russert — such is life in New York.

These are not mispronunciations, but unexpected pronunciations. They assert group individuality — or, if you like, a benign ethnocentrism. If you come from New Haven, you know it's pronounced "New HAY-ven"; it's fun to spot the outsiders who call it "NEW Haven." Only visitors call Yakima, Wash., "Ya-KEE-ma" — laughing natives "YACK-i-maw." Michiganders who live in "D'troit" will smile at July's Republican conventioneers — looking forward to football's "dee-fense" — calling their town "Dee-troit." There is no "cord" in Concord, nor any "body" in Peabody — those Massachusetts towns are "CONkit" and "PEAB'dy."

The joke sent along most frequently in the mail on shibboleths was "How do you pronounce the name of the capital of Kentucky?" The answer, of course, is neither "Louie-ville" nor "Lou-a-ville" — it's "Frankfort." And people who hold the "fort" in Frankfort are as numerous as the descendents of the Ephraimites.

Writering

"Parenting" is a good new word. "Mothering" carries a connotation of protection or nurture; "fathering," or "siring," means causing an offspring to be born, metaphorically extended to a country, cause or invention (Edward Teller is known as the "father of the H-bomb"; nobody can be called "mother of the H-bomb").

Because mothering and fathering have gained specific connotations beyond parenthood, "parenting" is a useful way of being specific about being a parent without getting bollixed up with the role of each parent or bogged down in sex arguments.

However, the new word is in danger of being vogued to death. (What could be vogue-ier than to use "vogue" as a verb?) Not every stern refusal to part with car keys or indulgent willingness to install a separate telephone line is an example of "parenting": to me, the word means "conscious attention to a child's upbringing." A good parody of the word's excess usage comes from Mary Ellen Donovan of Plainfield, N. H.:

"I'm writering to request a bit of advisering about a problem I've been having with parenting," she corresponds. Eschewing sourgraping, Miss Donovan worries "that there's been all this talkering and seminaring about parenting of late and none about aunting, uncling or siblinging. Do you think my resentment toward parenting could stem from something that happened while I was childing?"

Having conceived this word, let us give it a good home, and not keep nagging at it, lest the act of marriage become "espousing."

Is when

"'Downhills,'" I explained recently, "is when dice are loaded to bring out a low, or down, number, and 'uphills' is when the dice are loaded to come out high."

Snake eyes and boxcars: I was right about the old slang, wrong in my syntax. J. B. Kritzer of West Orange, N. J., writes: "The complement clause following a copula must agree with the subject as to case; that is, it should be nominative, and each of your 'when' clauses is adverbial."

I think he means that "when" cannot be used to join a noun to a clause unless the idea of time is involved. It's a mistake to say, "Unemployment is when people are out of work"; it's right to say, "Midnight is when the wolves howl."

"Is when," used in a definition the wrong way, is childlike. A mature writer would write, "'Downhills' refers to dice which are loaded . . ." It's more a matter of style than grammar, and I'm not a child anymore. "A solecism is when you make a mistake in English" is the sort of thing a kid would say. A very smart kid.

Knowlton lost in CBC time warp?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Tennish, anyone?

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, custodian of Knowlton Nash and the nightly National News, is cutting off the nation's elevenses. In a brutal blow calculated to land next January, the CBC is relocating The National from 11 p.m. to 10 p.m., exposing a generation of unsuspecting viewers to an experience which can only be described.

But in the time warp which constitutes the CBC's evening schedule, nothing is really as it seems. Viewers who have at times been alarmed to find the lead players in the Iranian crisis sporting numbered jerseys and carrying long, bent sticks may by now realize, albeit with a muffled curse, that the 11 p.m. time slot is more of a hint than a guarantee. One evening football game can boot the National into that post-midnight wasteland of anthems and test signals where the air is so thin that only movies of questionable virtue can breathe comfortably. Here, surrounded on other channels by Gorgo skulking in the half-light and Something with Two Heads struggling to collect his thoughts, determined viewers can find Mr. Nash cheerfully unconcerned by his late entrance, relating the horrors in San Salvador as though tuning in to a 1:30 a.m. newscast were as natural a nocturnal pastime as, say, sleep.

In the labyrinth of the CBC itself, meanwhile, there are cries of protest and indignation. Members of the news department fear rumors of a five-minute slash in the newscast and the creation of a 40-minute nightly public affairs program to stretch between The National and a five-minute wrap-up of the news at 11 p.m. Before you know it, current affairs will have swallowed the newscast whole and be leaking, minute by minute, into territory held sacred by awards shows, post-game wrap-ups and the day's curling highlights. ("I apologize for the interruption, but I've just been handed an urgent professor of political science from Carleton University.")

But if The National is elbowed out of the picture in five-minute chunks, what is Mr. Nash to do? Will he be forced to don skates and carve out the day's news on the blue line, or will we see him masquerading as color commentator in the CBC broadcast booth? ("One of the finest goals we've seen in a while, don't you agree, Knowlton?" "Well, King Baudouin has accepted the resignation of Belgian Premier Wilfried Martens, plunging the country into its latest political crisis. For more on the story . . .")

Like any rare wine, The National may not travel well — but if it fails to survive the transition to 10 p.m., the CBC should be able to salvage isolated bits. If nothing else, Mr. Nash's whimsical delivery of the sign-off — "good night" — deserves a home in the music department.

Irish want end of ban on divorce

By DERMOT McEVOY

DUBLIN — Demand for divorce in the Republic of Ireland has become so strident that neither government nor opposition will be able for long to ignore it.

A newly formed Divorce Action Group in Dublin has, with a minimum of publicity, already won hundreds of adherents from all political parties. Further ginger groups are planned for Cork, Limerick and Galway.

Mrs. Maire Bates, a lawyer and widow involved in community advisory work, is the prime mover. "It has snowballed," she says. "The group was formed out of a chat in a pub on the cruelty of the constitutional ban on divorce. We booked a room for 50 in Liberty Hall and 200 turned up. We have been deluged with letters of support from all over the country and not always from people immediately affected."

The action group's national campaign opened with a conference in Dublin this week.

The Irish Republic shares with the pocket handkerchief republic of San Marino, in Italy, the distinction of being the only country in the West that prohibits divorce: all that Irish law allows in cases of adultery and persistent cruelty is separation. There can be no remarriage.

No statistics are available of the number of broken marriages in Ireland. The government declined to allow the category "separated" to be noted in the last census of population; only married, single or widowed could be counted.

The last figures available relate to 1976, when the Deserted Wives Register revealed that 5,000 women and 7,000 children) were involved.

Mrs. Bates said: "The no-divorce situation has led to chaos. Until recently a woman who had left her husband and gone to live with another man could register children in her new partner's name.

"Not any more; such children are now presumed to be the children of the husband she parted from even years before.

"Where second relationships break up, as is happening in hundreds of cases, the woman gets neither the deserted wife's allowance nor a widow's pension. It is heartbreaking."

The action group is conscious that the ban on divorce is a bar to a United Ireland as divorce is now readily available in Northern Ireland.

Notice to CNCP Telecommunications Subscribers

CNCP Telecommunications has filed an application with the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission for an increase in its rates. CNCP has proposed that the increases come into full effect on December 22, 1980 and that certain of the increases be approved on an interim basis to be effective June 20, 1980.

Q. Briefly, what is the application all about?
A. CNCP proposes to increase certain of its rates associated with Telex, Broadband Exchange, Private Wire, Telepost and Public Message services.

It is proposed that the requested increases for Telex service tolls and basic equipment and Broadband Exchange Service tolls be approved on an interim basis to be effective June 20, 1980.

It also is proposed that all requested increases become effective on a full and final basis on December 22, 1980.

Additional revenues to be derived from the proposed increases in 1980 are estimated at $2,086,000 arising from interim increases and $183,000 from full approval. Estimated additional revenues to be derived in 1981 are $8,156,000.

Q. How would my rates be affected by the application?
A. Some examples of how rates would be affected by the changes being applied for are set out below. A detailed schedule of the proposed changes, which indicates specifically how rates would be affected, is provided in the application itself.

Telex/DataTelex Service: Increase of 4% in tolls, increases in basic equipment rental of $4.00 for keyboard send/receive units, $3.00 for automatic send/receive units, and $8.00 for Telex 2000 units, increases of 9% on miscellaneous equipment and an increase of 32% on Telex Computer Inquiry Service local calling.

Broadband Exchange Service: Increases ranging from 0% to 22% for Intra-Canada tolls for service up to 2400 BPS and increases ranging from 6% to 20% for Canada/U.S. tolls.

Private Wire Service: Changes to voice and Schedule 4 data circuits are proposed as follows: increases ranging from 1% to 21% in Prince Edward Island, increases averaging 1.2% (range is from 1% decrease to 21% increase) in Nova Scotia, an average decrease of 5% (range is from 13% decrease to 7% increase) in New Brunswick, increases averaging 14% (range is from 10% to 128%) in Manitoba, increases averaging 26% (range is from 25% to 148% in Saskatchewan and increases averaging 4% (range is from 1% to 22%) in Alberta. Infodat circuitry charges will be restructured resulting in an average increase of 4% (range is from 60% decrease to 218% increase in the rate components across the mileage bands). Infodat access charges will change by a range of 22% decrease to 48% increase. Average increase from circuitry and access combined is estimated at 5%. Asynchronous non-recurring charges will increase from $55. to $75., synchronous non-recurring charges up to 9600 BPS will increase from $55. to $125. with an increase for higher speeds from $55. to $175.

Telepost Service: For public Telepost service, an increase of 33% on the basic 50 word block and additional word blocks for Intra-Canada, an increase of 22% for the basic 100 word block and 29% on additional word blocks for Canada/U.S. and an increase of 18% on the basic 100 word block and 11% on additional word blocks for Canada/Alaska. Also proposed for Telex Telepost handling charge is an increase of 35 cents for Intra-Canada, Canada/U.S. and Canada/Alaska.

Public Message Service: It is proposed to consolidate the existing two zones for Intra-Canada service. Increases on full rate are 30% for basic 15 words for present zone 1 and 13% for additional words for present zones 1 and 2. Increases on Night Letter are 13% for basic 35 words for present zone 1, with a 1% decrease for present zone 2 and a change for additional words from 50 cents for 25 words to 4 cents a word. Increases on Money Order Messages for basic 20 words are 27% in present zone 1 and 2% in present zone 2. Increases for messenger delivery are 25% and Tel-Tex service charges will increase from $2.50 to $2.75 Intra-Canada and from $1.00 to $2.75 for incoming overseas.

Q. Why is the company asking for a rate increase now?
A. The full details of the company's justification for the increases are set out in its application. By way of summary, the company has made the following statement:

> "CNCP requires the proposed rate increases to offset, in part, increasing cost pressures.
> It is CNCP's position that maintenance of sound financial stability is in the public interest in that it enables CNCP to continue in its role as an effective competitor in the supply of telecommunications services.
> While the rate increases proposed will make a significant contribution to the financial stability of CNCP, they are still insufficient to generate an adequate rate of return.
> CNCP is continuing in its efforts to curb the inflationary impact on costs and is relying on the requested increases as only one means for the strengthening of its overall financial situation."

All of the assertions above, and the application for a general increase in rates to come into effect on December 22, 1980, will be subject to questioning and examination at a CRTC public hearing in which any CNCP Telecommunications subscriber may participate.

Q. Where can I see a copy of the application?
A. A copy of the application, consisting of Part A - Request for Increase in Rates and Part B - Memoranda of Support, is available for public inspection during normal business hours at all CNCP business offices and at the offices of the CRTC and will be sent to anyone filing a notice of intention to participate at the hearing respecting the part of the application requesting general rate increases to be effective December 22, 1980.

Q. How can I comment on the part of the application requesting interim rate increases to be effective June 20, 1980?
A. If you have a comment or matter that you feel the Commission should take into account in reviewing the part of the application requesting interim rate increases, you can write directly to the Commission. Your letter should clearly state your views and should include any relevant information that may be useful in explaining or supporting those views. Send your letter so it will be received by May 19, 1980 to J. G. Patenaude, Secretary General, Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0N2. A copy of your letter should also be sent to A. G. Duncan, Director, Regulatory Matters - General, CNCP Telecommunications, 740 Notre Dame Street West, Montreal, Quebec H3C 3X6. In case of delivery by hand, you may use any CNCP Telecommunications business office.

After considering all submissions with respect to the request that a portion of the proposed rate come into effect on an interim basis on June 20, 1980, the Commission will issue its decision on this aspect of the application.

Q. How can I comment on the part of the application requesting general rate increases to be effective December 22, 1980?
A. On August 1, 1980, CNCP Telecommunications will file a supplement to its application which will include responses to an initial set of CRTC interrogatories and an update of data pertinent to the part of the application requesting general rate increases to be effective December 22, 1980. Information regarding how to comment on this aspect of the application, including details as to the dates scheduled for the public hearing and the deadlines for filing letters of intervention, interrogatories and notices of intention to participate, will be provided in a notice to be mailed by CNCP to its subscribers at that time.

Q. Whom may I contact for further information?
A. For additional information on the application or the procedure to be followed, please contact CNCP Telecomminications or call the CRTC at (819) 997-1027. To find out the rights and obligations of parties to proceeding, please read the CRTC Telecommunications Rules of Procedure. Copies are available at a cost of $2.50 from Canadian Government Publishing Centre, Supply and Services Canada, Hull, Quebec K1A 0S9 (Catalogue No. BC92-21/1979).

Royal planning U.S. expansion

MONTREAL (CP) — The United States is the No. 1 target in the Royal Bank's international expansion, Rowland Frazee, chairman and chief executive officer, said Wednesday.

The Royal has operated in the U.S. since 1899 but is not happy with its past performance, Frazee said in a speech to the Montreal Society of Financial Analysts.

It is injecting $100 million of new capital into its chief U.S. subsidiary, Royal Bank and Trust Co. of New York, and once regulatory approval comes through, this subsidiary will be among the top 80 U.S. banks.

The Royal has also completed acquisition of banks in Britain and Germany, and its London operations handled $10.8 billion in business in the last nine months, chiefly in Eurocurrency and bond dealings.

Frazee said the Royal wants to become known as a first-tier international bank, adding that last year the international division accounted for 30 per cent of the bank's assets and 34 per cent of its earnings. In the first quarter this year it has accounted for 43 per cent of earnings. The bank has representatives in 45 countries.

B of M offers option

MONTREAL (CP) — The Bank of Montreal has announced that home-owner customers whose mortgages come up for renewal in May will have the option of taking a one-year closed mortgage at 15.5 per cent, one per cent below the rate for new mortgages.

The bank also announced it is introducing a two-year closed mortgage at 16.75 per cent.

The rate for one-year open mortgages — which can be cancelled without penalty — remains unchanged at 17 per cent, and three-year and five-year closed mortgages — not cancellable without penalty — also remain unchanged at 17 per cent and 17.5 per cent respectively.

The policy of offering a reduced rate for renewals will be reviewed monthly, the bank said.

Stock bargains abound in bear market trough

By ROBERT METZ
New York Times

NEW YORK — The late March stock market massacre sent prices of many stocks to the lowest levels in six years, and some say bargains abound.

In fact, some believe that a buying opportunity exists today comparable to that of late 1974, when the worst bear market in modern history ended. Thereafter stock prices as measured by the Dow Jones industrial average jumped about 50 per cent in a mere six months of bullish trading.

No one can predict, of course, that a similar bull market will prevail in the months ahead, but Wall Street is ever hopeful. In any case, one firm, Oppenheimer & Co., has produced the latest in its periodic computer screenings of stocks it calls "Magic Sixes." These are shares that sell at less than six times earnings, yield 6 per cent or more and are priced at less than 60 per cent of book value.

At present, the average multiple of the stocks in the list is less than four times earnings. This means that the investor would pay two times pretax earnings. Some businessmen appraise companies that they intend to acquire on the multiple of pretax earnings they must pay.

While the average return available on shares in the screening is still well under that to be earned on such fixed income investments as bonds, the equities in the list still offer an average 8.93 per cent yield, historically quite high.

Meanwhile, the average discount from tangible book value is more than 50 per cent. (Tangible book ignores the value of good will and of brand names, which in many cases represent extremely valuable assets.) Also, if one were to adjust book value for inflation the average discount from book in many cases would be more than 75 per cent.

Oppenheimer notes that the list, compiled as of share prices on April 10, contains the largest number of names since the inception of the series several years ago. There are 367 qualifying equities — more than five times the number listed in August 1979 before the so-called massacre of last October.

The list includes some of the great brand names of American enterprise: Armstrong Cork, the huge Lancaster, Pa. floor covering manufacturer; Bankers Trust; Bethlehem Steel; Borden; Chessie Systems, the railroad company; Owens Illinois, a leading container manufacturer, and Woolworth.

There is no guarantee, of course, that investors will begin to bid for these shares and others in the Oppenheimer list and thus give them higher multiples soon, nor is there any assurance that these shares have dropped to their lowest levels of the current uncertain market.

The latest figures from the New York Stock Exchange clearly show that the March massacre dropped many customers' margin accounts below the dangerous 40 per cent level and that, as a result, margin calls were rampant and a contributing factor in the market's decline in the last week of March.

This is apparent from the fact that those accounts with under 40 per cent of equity made up 17 per cent of all margin accounts, a rise from just 11 per cent a month earlier.

Even more significant, the percentage of total margin debt in accounts with less than 40 per cent equity soared to 45 per cent, from 16 per cent, and that is where they stand today. Most brokers call customers asking for more money when customers' equity drops below 35 per cent.

Even more interesting in the latest figures, some say, is the fact that margin debt fell so little in the month of March.

At $11.7 billion, margin debt was lower by 5.8 per cent from the record $12.5 billion shown at the end of February. But the March total represented a modest drop from the total of $11.8 billion at the end of January.

One analyst believes that the current high level of margin debt clearly suggests that, despite the high costs of maintaining margin debt, few investors are willing to let their shares be sold at current levels.

But another analyst was more pessimistic, noting that recent lackluster sessions indicate no real buying interest.

Thus, the latter concludes: any crisis that sends stock prices lower still — such as the bankruptcy of a major corporation, or a deterioration in international events — could result in heavy margin calls and a further deep decline in stock prices.

Western syndicate buys Gambles, MacLeods

WINNIPEG (CP) — A western Canadian syndicate announced Friday the purchase of a group of retail stores from Gamble-Skogmo Corp. of Minneapolis for $100 million.

The group of stores, established in 1917, is one of the oldest retail organizations in western Canada and had been operated by Gamble-Skogmo since 1947.

CanWest Capital Corp. of Winnipeg, Cavendish Investment Group of Calgary and Richard J. Hobbs of Winnipeg announced at a news conference they completed arrangements this week for the purchase of the stores.

Final details should be completed by May 30.

The purchase of the Winnipeg-based Gambles-Macleod-Stedman group, is the first venture into the merchandising field for both investment companies.

The group, which includes hardware, variety and department stores, has 526 stores across Canada. The group's Winnipeg head office will be managed by Hobbs.

I. H. Asper, chairman of CanWest, said the purchase followed about six weeks of intensive negotiations. He said an agreement for the sale was reached Wednesday and was ratified Friday by all companies involved.

Asper said several companies from other parts of the country were also trying to buy the group because of its "tremendous growth possibilities."

"Because of our own biases and western sentiment it became irresistable to us."

The Cavendish Group, headed by Winnipeg-born Richard Bonnycastle, tried to buy the stores from Gamble-Skogmo a year ago for a reported $90 million.

However, the deal fell through at the last minute because of legal difficulties, George Ploder, Cavendish vice-prsident, told reporters.

Gambles has six department stores located in Regina, Winnipeg and Saskatoon. Macleods, which specialized in hardware goods, has 267 stores located mainly in rural centres in western Canada. The Stedman group has 259 stores across Canada with its major market in Ontario and the Maritimes.

Sales of the group totaled $233 million last year with pre-tax profits of about $20 million.

In response to questioning by reporters, Asper said there are no plans to cut back on the group's operations.

"We're a growth-oriented company," he said. "We would hope that we will be in a position to revitalize the company and make it more aggressive."

CanWest Capital has extensive interests in the fields of financial services, television, entertainment and liquid chemical fertilizer.

Cavendish's main investments are in oil and gas, real estate, venture capital and money management.

Hobbs worked for 23 years for Canadian Tire Corp. He left the organization last year as senior vice-president responsible for a dealer franchising.

Canadian fishermen capture cod

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian fishermen are replacing Japanese deepsea fleets in the quest for black cod in the 200-mile fishing zone declared off British Columbia's coast Jan. 1, 1977.

Since Canada claimed the offshore zone, the B.C. catch of the gourmet delicacy has climbed steadily, from 400 tonnes in 1977 through 1,500 in 1978 and about 1,800 tonnes through November, 1979.

And fishing, with traps and long lines on the bottom of the continental shelf, is reported to be increasing. Japanese catches in Canadian waters, allowed by permit when a species is considered surplus to domestic requirements, dropped to 2,200 tonnes in 1978

The catch allotted the Japanese was scaled down because of the increasing Canadian fishery and federal fisheries authorities say the domestic effort has expanded to the point where foreign fishing for black cod should be banned.

Permits aren't likely to be granted for Japanese cod fishermen within the 200-mile zone in the coming year.

The Japanese fleets are also being pushed out of U.S. waters off the Alaska, Washington, Oregon and California coasts since that country declared its 200-mile zone March 11, 1977, three months after the extended Canadian limits took effect.

In 1977, the Japanese took 13,083 tonnes of cod in Alaskan waters and the Koreans took some while American fishermen landed 746 tonnes.

But by 1978, the Japanese Alaskan catch was down to 6,274 tons, while the Americans caught 1,644 tons and the Koreans 555.

However, while the Japanese are being phased out of the fishery they still control the market. Fishermen are getting $1.25 to $1.40 a pound for black cod in B.C. but the Tokyo price is $2 a pound.

Big demand for the rich-tasting fish remains in Japan.

In B.C. it's most often sold smoked in specialty shops but the market is growing as more people become aware of it.

The black cod fishery was the first to be reclaimed by Canada in establishing the economic zone.

There was also some B.C. fishing in 1979 for hake, a bottom species.

But foreign fishermen will continue to harvest hake until it becomes economic for Canadian fishing interests to set up factory vessels to process the catch at sea.

There is no demand for hake in Canada, although 3,356 tonnes of hake caught by B.C. fishermen was sold by a B.C. fishing industry consortium to the Polish fleet operating in the 200-mile zone by permit.

Six or seven B.C. boats took part in that fishery, and a consortium of Prince Rupert fishermen took about 450 tonnes with the factory trawler Callistratus.

There is some concern about how much fishing pressure the black cod stocks can stand.

They migrate south and north along the continental shelf and overfishing of immature stocks in the south could create problems.

Bleak news for U.S. forest industry

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The bleak news just seems to keep piling up for the big timber industry of the northwestern U.S., already reeling from the effects of tight-money policies and the resulting building slump.

Some recent examples:

— Louisiana-Pacific Corp. reported a 21-per-cent decline in earnings for the first quarter of 1980.

— Georgia-Pacific Corp. announced a reduction of more than $100 million in planned capital expenditures.

— The Portland-based Western Wood Products Association estimated that 44,000 timber industry workers are idle in 12 western states.

In Oregon, mill closures have become a daily occurrence. Some spokesmen for the state's largest industry, with an annual payroll topping $1 billion, say the slump is worse than 1974-75 recession.

Hugh Love of the American Plywood Association, based in Tacoma, Wash., calls the current downturn "the most rapid market decline I've seen in 12 years."

"In some areas, it's reminiscent of the Depression."

More than 14,000 timber industry workers in Oregon have been laid off since last November and some officials worry that smaller companies will go out of business.

The National Forest Products Association in Washington says that more than half of the plywood mills in the South and West have closed or cut production by up to 40 per cent.

Meanwhile, the U.S. commerce department reported Friday that construction of new homes plummeted 22 per cent in March, the largest monthly drop in 20 years. Federal officials said there were 42 per cent fewer housing starts last month than March, 1979.

Oregon's assistant administrator of the state employment division, Don Steward, said Thursday that 13,500 timber industry employees have been laid off as of last week, and several hundred more millworkers were notified this week that they face similar action.

Steward sees no signs of relief soon.

"There's no hope right now for the housing industry with the way interest rates are," he said. "My guess is this will stretch out at least another three to four months."

A-G to probe libel letter leak

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Allan Williams has ordered an internal inquiry into how a letter to his ministry complaining about the conduct of three RCMP constables in Fort St. John, got back to the police officers who then threatened to sue the complainant for libel.

Williams said he is disturbed that a written complaint, addresssed to deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel, should serve as the basis for a possible libel action.

"It seems to me to be quite improper for a person who makes a complaint of this nature to be faced with a situation where his or her private communication ends up in the hands of the lawyer who is acting for the police officers," Williams said.

The letter, written by Delores Schubert, complained about the policemen's actions when they arrested her son Danny, 23, last August.

Vogel wrote Mrs. Schubert informing her he had sent her complaint to the B.C. Police Commission.

Mrs. Schubert then received a letter from the policemen's lawyer asking for an apology.

pic movement for deciding to boycott the Moscow Games.

Vitaly Smirnov, Soviet member of the International Olympic Committee and a vice-president, planned to ask for the suspension at a meeting of the IOC executive board.

The Russians charge that the USOC has broken Rule 24 of the Olympic Charter by yielding to political pressure and going along with President Jimmy Carter's call for a boycott.

Any decision would have to be taken by the full IOC session, scheduled for Moscow in July — before the scheduled start of the Games.

But Killanin, who met privately in Geneva Sunday with Peter V. Ueberroth, managing director of the Los Angeles Organizing Commitee, said the IOC "had every confidence" in the committee and there was no question of removing the games from the West Coast city.

Killanin's strong support for the U.S. committee was the only positive news to emerge from the gathering of Olympic leaders at IOC headquarters over the weekend.

As the leaders gathered again today, there was deep pessimism that they could stave off the ever-widening boycott of the Moscow Games. The fate of the boycott was expected to become clearer after three meetings today.

The consensus of many Olympic leaders was that a major political move by the Soviet Union over Afghanistan could stop a widespread Western boycott of the Games.

In Ottawa, the president of the Canadian Sports Federation, says he expects the federal government to announce a boycott of the Olympic Summer Games in Moscow.

Speaking at a weekend meeting of the federation in Ottawa, Hugh Plant said a speech by Sports Minister Gerald Regan indicated to him that "Regan was letting athletes down gracefully."

The federal government is expected to announce whether it will join the boycott before the end of this week.

Forces purge charged

OTTAWA (CP) — Former defence minister Allan McKinnon says there may be a witch hunt by the Liberal government to get rid of generals and admirals holding the top command positions in the armed forces.

The Victoria MP asked assurances in the Commons today that Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne is not conducting such a witch hunt and then told reporters that such a hunt is a possibility.

He said the commanders are being offered transfers unacceptable to them and being told that the alternative is resignation.

He told reporters that it is a "sleazy way to get rid of people."

Lamontagne did not directly answer McKinnon but said that some senior officers are taking early retirement.

Later the minister issued a statement that said some of the senior officials MacKinnon was talking about were being moved to more senior positions.

Lt.-Gen. G.C. Theriault will move from deputy chief of defence staff to vice chief — the No. 2 man in the armed forces; Admiral Jock Allan will move from chief of Maritime Command to replace Theriault, and Lt.-Gen. K. E. Lewis will move from deputy commander at NORAD headquarters to become commander of Air Command.

'Macaroni House' at 4201 Quadra

My curiosity has been aroused regarding the large stone house on Quadra Street, corner of Beckwith. Who built it and how many years ago? Is it a heritage building and is it occupied now?

Indeed it is intended for heritage designation and it is still occupied by a member of the family who had it built 70 years ago.

This is the house on Bull's Corner, 4201 Quadra, which University of Victoria conservator Douglas Franklin regards as a classical bungalow structure.

Built of native stone and roofed with slate, it has withstood the years and onslaughts of weather with stolid resistance.

Mrs. Gladys Bull, daughter-in-law of the builder Josiah Bull Sr., says children in the area call it the Macaroni House because of the unusual pointing between stones.

Franklin said the mason who did the original stonework used a red dye in the pointing, with lasting effect.

Mrs. Bull, widow of former Saanich police chief Josiah Bull, has lived in the house 30 years, but her memory of it goes back much further when it was a farm house and heart of Bull Senior's dairying business on 40 acres of land that included wooded hillsides, sloping meadows, marshland and few neighbors.

There are four bedrooms upstairs and five rooms downstairs; the kitchen is huge and remains largely untouched except for conversion of a pantry to a bathroom. Some of the windows are of colored glass.

Along with many other buildings in Saanich with an interesting past, the stone house is on the municipal registry of structures with historic value. But it has not yet been declared a heritage home, which would protect it from alteration and demolition.

What began as a simple fender bender for Times cartoonist Bob Bullough (right) ended up in a bureaucratic cartoon all its own at the ICBC. Bullough, who signs his work Bullo and has a licence plate to match, had some incredible misadventures that would make a Marx Brothers comedy dull in comparison. If you think a computer can foul you up, read on and see what happens when you find yourself at the mercy of some of the antics going on down at the local claims centre. It was only Bullough's sense of humor that kept his dented fender from denting his psyche

The story of Bullo in Wonderland

By NORMAN GIDNEY

It all started in a shopping centre parking lot about three weeks ago.

Somebody scraped some chrome and put a small dent in the Bulloughs' 1978 brown Fury while Mrs. Bullough was shopping.

"It was certainly no big deal," says Bob Bullough, 3012 Volmer, Colwood. He's business manager of the Pacific Centre for Human Development in Colwood and also once-a-week cartoonist for the Times.

A simple little fender bender that shouldn't take ICBC more than a few minutes to dispose of, right?

Wrong. Read on.

First thing Bullough did was to check the ICBC booklet he had shoved into the car's glove compartment some time ago.

He was in luck, it said, Victoria has a drive-in claims centre.

So Bob and Delane Bullough drove to the claims centre at Douglas and Cloverdale.

"This is where the fun starts," he says.

A giant stop sign told them to wait. So they waited. And waited some more.

"To me it seems like an hour, but my wife says it was only three or four minutes."

Several cars which were obvious accident victims were parked at one side of the lot, so they drove the family sedan into an empty slot next to them and went in search of help.

Inside the office they discovered why nobody was outside looking for drive-in claimants. The ICBC booklet they had was out of date. The receptionist informed Bullough it was now a phone-in claim centre and everyone has to have an appointment.

"Well, I'm talking to you," Bullough told her. "Yes, but you've got to phone in," replied the receptionist.

"Can I use that phone there?" Bullough asked. The answer was no.

"She sent me out to the pay phone on the corner of Douglas."

Mrs. Bullough waited in the reception area and Bullough could see her and the receptionist from the phone booth.

"I phoned and she answered. I said: 'Hi, it's me.' "

She transferred Bullough to a claims taker, who asked the usual questions — name, address, vehicle registration number, licence plate number.

B-U-L-L-O, he replied to the last question. It's his new personalized blue, green and white licence plate, the nom de cartoon he uses on his drawings in the Times every Monday.

"No, your plate number," said the ICBC man.

Bullough repeated the five letters, telling him that was his licence number as of March 8.

The phone-in claims taker told him personalized plates have to have six letters. Up to six letters, Bullough corrected him.

Silence. Clicks, and another voice on the phone.

Again the same question, again the same answer.

"No it isn't," said claims taker No. 2. "It's EFV 963."

Bullough persisted.

ICBC man No.2: "But the computer says you have EFV 963."

Bullough: "I have a personalized licence number."

ICBC man: "I don't care — the computer says it's EFV 963."

Where are you located? asked the ICBC man.

"Look out the window," says Bullough.

His car and its distinctive licence plate are visible from the offices.

"Well, I'll put you down as EFV 963. Do you have your wife's licence number?"

No. But she's sitting in your reception area. Can you go out and ask her? asked Bullough. No, he wasn't allowed to leave the phone-in claims area in case someone phones.

But you're talking to me on the phone, said Bullough.

"Can I bring it back there?"

"No, I'm on the phone."

"In that time you could come out to the reception area and get the number," said Bullough. Okay.

He hung up, ran down the sidewalk to the claims centre and met ICBC man No. 2.

"I said: 'Look out there. That's my car, 'BULLO.' He said: 'Huh.'"

The receptionist then said Bullough would have to move his car because he didn't have an appointment. So he moved the car. He and his wife went back behind the reception area to talk to the claims-taker again.

"At the end of it he said: 'When would you like your appointment?' I said that's the reason we're here. He said he was on the phone and couldn't leave his desk.

"Okay, give me an appointment," Bullough told him. Come back Monday at 2:30, he said.

"So I jumped in may car with my wife and roared off, completely disgusted."

But within a few minutes of recounting his Marx Brothers exploits in trying to get through to the corporation, Bullough and his wife were both laughing.

"There is a kicker, though," said Bullough.

At one point in the exercise, another employee came out of the rear office area to shoot the breeze with the receptionist.

"The other girl was leaning on the counter and looked out the window at my car. She said: 'B-U-L-L-O — ugh, what a name!"

Centre guidelines puzzle Broadmead

Broadmead lawyers will ask Saanich council tonight to reverse its decision allowing developers to double the size of the rival Tillicum shopping centre.

"There doesn't seem to be any guidelines any more," Broadmead Farms Ltd. vice-president Merv Mawson said today.

Mawson said his company changed plans for a shopping centre at Royal Oak twice to accomodate the municipality and now he wants to know what has happened to the guidelines governing the size of Tillicum.

A statement is being prepared today and Mawson said he may read it himself to council tonight. He refused to divulge its contents.

A rezoning application for the 174,000-square foot Broadmead mall goes to public hearing April 29.

Three of five aldermen who voted in favor of removing a restrictive covenant to allow Tillicum developer Cal Investments Ltd., to add 200,000 square feet to the complex say court action initiated by Capital Region Board chairman James Campbell last week is a bluff.

The regional board cannot legally stop Saanich from allowing the addition of an Eatons store to plans for the 295,000-square foot Tillicum development, Ald. Geoff Vantreight said.

Municipal solicitor Chris Nation and Cal Investment's Vancouver law firm told Saanich the municipality does not need the regional board's approval to drop the restrictive covenent.

Referral to the regional board is only required if the property is to be rezoned.

Ald. Mary Casilio and Irene Block on the weekend accused the regional district of meddling in Saanich business.

Vantreight, Casilio and Block supported aldermen Sandy Noel and Ed Lum in passing the vote during a standing committee meeting last Monday. The vote must be ratified by council tonight.

Curtain goes up on spring

When Linda Theriault switched on her electric lawnmower her livingroom drapes caught fire.

City fire deputy Fred Severson said the woman was treated for burns received Sunday afternoon when she ripped burning drapery from the wall.

He said she apparently had plugged the lawnmower into a livingroom outlet.

But the wire was too light and when it heated up the electrical outlet, the box and nearby curtains caught fire.

Damage was estimated at $2,300.

Inner Harbor moorage could cost 50% more

Moorage rates at the city-owned Inner Harbor floats in front of The Empress will go up May 1 — in some categories by as much as 50 per cent — if city council approves the move Thursday.

For the peak summer period, May 1 to Sept. 30, the new rate will be $3 a day. It was $2.

In the off-season, moorage will rise by an average of 28 per cent, to $3.30 per metre of boat length a month if paid one month in advance and to $4.20 per metre if paid in advance for more than one month in order to discourage lengthy stays.

The new rates are designed to match the fees charged by the federal government at its new boat basin at the foot of Fort.

Aldermen have also decided to pull out of an agreement with the federal Department of Transport under which Victoria has managed Fishermen's Wharf in James Bay.

They are serving notice to Ottawa that after May 30, Victoria will no longer lease the wharf.

"In the opinion of the city, neither the fee structure nor the regulations have been satisfactory, with the result that the facility has been difficult to administer," said a report from assistant city manager Colin Crisp.

Victoria is losing money on the arrangement, Crisp told the finance committee, and Ottawa refuses to allow wharfage rates to be increased. The department says they are set nationally and there cannot be separate fee schedules on the east and west coasts.

"Needless to say, the market for this type of facility varies substantially from the east to the west coast. In this particular area the fees are significantly lower than those charged by private marinas," he said.

Ironically, the Fishermen's Wharf fees are even lower than the rates charged by Ottawa at the new federal boat basin at the foot of Fort.

Crisp said the city has been trying since December, 1978, to get some action from Ottawa but the transport department has not replied to the city's letters.

Ottawa owns Fishermen's Wharf but the city employs a wharfinger to supervise the floats and collect wharfage fees and electricity bills. Victoria buys power wholesale and retails it to boat owners at a flat rate per vessel.

Crisp said it is expensive and time-consuming to try to collect from fishermen and boat owners who do not pay their bills. The city's only recourse is small debts court.

Galiano safe crackers get $250 cash, stamps

Ganges RCMP are investigating a safe-cracking discovered early Sunday at Galiano Island post office.

Police said the building near Sturdies Bay ferry landing was entered during the weekend and a safe weighing about 450 pounds was carried outside and forced open.

About $250 cash and postage stamps thought to be worth several hundred dollars are missing.

Victoria police also report an incident dealing with a safe.

Mail was stolen, envelopes were torn open and an undetermined number of cheques are thought to be missing from a downtown letter drop broken into Sunday.

City police recovered various pieces of opened mail in the Johnson-Pandora area, apparently from a box in the 700 block Yates.

Some envelopes were found scattered about the upper walk of Maynard Court mall, between Yates and Johnson, some near Pandora and Douglas and others in an exit doorway at Royal Olympic Hotel.

Most of the mail was believed to have originated at various business places in the area.

At 6:20 p.m. Sunday, parishioner Andrew Peter Robin was returning to St. John's Church, 1611 Quadra, when he heard a bang coming from the church office at the rear of the chancel.

Thinking it was someone from the church, he called out to say he was not coming in directly. The banging stopped and a dark-skinned male emerged and walked away.

Robin told police he saw another man walking to the church parking lot, then noticed an open window on the south side of the building.

When he checked inside he found the office safe intact but battered, apparently with a pick and a grub hoe which were lying on the floor.

A further check of the building disclosed four wallets were missing, along with about $180 they contained.

Ten dollars cash and a number of passes to Crystal Pool were stolen in a break-in at James Bay Community Centre, 88 Oswego, where a door was kicked in and two storage cupboards forced overnight Saturday.

Nine persons were arrested and held overnight for breach of the peace after three police departments were called to quell a drinking party in a Lampson Street home early Sunday.

Esquimalt police said 30 to 40 persons in their early 20s were causing a disturbance and that Victoria and Saanich were asked to assist in breaking them up.

Oil overflow in Bowker

A Saanich municipal works crew used absorbent foam pads to mop up a minor oil spill in Bowker Creek last week. A spokesman for the B.C. Pollution Control Branch said today the oil came from 3965 Shelbourne, site of Young Day Greenhouses, where a light fuel oil delivery overflowed into a storm drain.

Council help sought on cable

Victoria city council has been asked to intervene with the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to oppose a takeover of Victoria Cablevision Ltd. by a Toronto firm.

Council's legal and intergovernmental affairs committee has agreed to Capital Cable Co-operative's request that Victoria write to the CRTC opposing the move. Council will vote on the issue Thursday.

Capital Cable, a citizens' organization of which former mayor Peter Pollen is vice-president, has been trying to get community control of the local cable television operation.

It said in a letter to council the takeover by Canadian Cablesystems will further concentrate the ownership of cable television and increase costs to the subscriber.

Capital also objected to the fact that the CRTC will only hear pros and cons on the transfer of the cable licence to Victoria Cablevision's new owner, and is not throwing open the competition to all comers.

"The control of this licence should be open to free and competitive applications, in the interest of the subscriber," said CCC.

A heavenly blast over Victoria

"It will be like an explosion — like a nova suddenly appearing in the sky."

That's what University of Victoria physicist Dr. Harry Sullivan expects to happen when a U.S.-European rocket experiment involving the release of a barium cloud is triggered.

According to Sullivan, scientists are expecting the rocket Ariane to release its gases between June 1 and 15, with as little as two hours advance notice to observers across the continent.

The display will be visible from Victoria — weather permitting — due south about 40 degrees above the horizon.

The show will consist of a cloud of barium gas, ejected 30,000 miles high by the European rocket to study the way solar radiation affects matter at that altitude.

The barium cloud experiment has been devised jointly by the Max Planck Institute of West Germany and the Space Sciences Laboratory of the University of California at Berkeley.

Some of the information from the experiment may prove useful in developing fusion-energy reactors, and in any case will enrich the knowledge of American scientists working on energy problems.

Here in Canada, the National Research Council will be in touch with the Planck Institute to receive final word on the release.

The NRC will alert its information centre at Prince Albert, Sask., and observing posts in other parts of Canada will be contacted by telephone.

Release time is expected to be close to 10 p.m. PST (midnight CST) as Ariane passes over the southern sky.

UVic's Sullivan and five other university astronomers will man cameras and telescopes at strategic locations at the UVic observatory, the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain, Mount Kobau near Osoyoos and at the hamlet of Ernfold, Sask.

In addition, Sullivan will have an instrument which he hopes will record residual activity of the barium experiment.

His underlying interest in the burst is the earth's magnetic field and how particles behave within it under unlimited conditions.

Sabres first in; Canadiens dim Stars

By The Canadian Press

Buffalo Sabres get a rest but the long grind towards the Stanley Cup continues for six other hopefuls.

The Sabres became the first team to earn a spot among the National Hockey League's final four when they defeated Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 on Sunday to sweep their best-of-seven, quarter-final playoff in four games.

And Buffalo coach Scotty Bowman said he'd like to draw Montreal Canadiens as the Sabres' next opponent.

"It would mean a lot to me personally if we play Montreal — not because I used to be their coach, but because of the great talent and history they have," said Bowman. "It would really be something for us to shoot for."

The defending champion Canadiens evened their quarter-final with Minnesota North Stars at 2-2 with 5-1 and 5-0 wins Sunday and Saturday. The teams play the fifth game in Montreal, Tuesday.

New York Rangers defeated Philadelphia Flyers 4-2 on Sunday to shave the Flyers' series edge to 3-1. Philadelphia won 3-0 on Saturday. Game Five is Tuesday.

New York Islanders and Boston Bruins play the fourth game of their series tonight, with the Islanders holding a commanding 3-0 lead. The Islanders pushed the Bruins to the brink of elimination with a 5-3 win Saturday.

The final two games of the Buffalo-Chicago series were defensive struggles. Buffalo had won 2-1 on Saturday to set up Sunday's decisive game.

"The game nearly got out of hand in the second period because we were so disorganized," said Bowman. "We were not doing the kind of things we are suppposed to do and we did not know whether we should take a chance and open up the game."

The Black Hawks were leading 2-0 late in the second period on goals by Bob Murray and Tom Lysiak and Buffalo goaltender Bob Sauve was being pelted by pucks as Chicago tried to pad the lead.

But John Van Boxmeer's goal with 28 seconds left in the second period got the Sabres close.

"After Van Boxmeer scored, we still did not want to take any chances in the third period because getting down two goals on the road with not much time to play could have proved disastrous," said Bowman.

But in the end, "It was our veteran line led by (Gil) Perreault and (Rick) Martin that picked up the slack from some of our younger players."

Martin scored in the ninth minute of the third period to tie it at 2-2 and Perreault scored the winning goal at 16:54.

The Canadiens, who lost the first two games of the series in Montreal, won their second in two nights at Bloomington to even the series.

"We didn't expect it to be easy," Minnesota coach Glen Sonmor said.

Rejean Houle scored twice and Yvon Lambert, Steve Shutt and Rod Langway had one each for the Canadiens. Steve Christoff scored for the North Stars.

Sonmor had predicted the Canadiens, without injured players Guy Lafleur, Guy Lapointe, Pierre Mondou and Doug Risebrough, would be tough after the defeats in Montreal. That's just what they were, dominating the North Stars in both ends of the rink in both games

Houle's second goal, at 7:15 of the third period, gave Montreal a 3-1 lead after Christoff had ignited a North Star rally to cut the margim to 2-1.

Bunny Larocque was in goal for Montreal for both weekend games.

Right winger Ron Duguay scored three goals to keep the Rangers alive. Centre Phil Esposito had a goal and two assists and left winger Don Maloney had three assists. Rick MacLeish and Reg Leach scored for Philadelphia.

Two of Duguay's goals came on power plays, ending a long string of New York frustration and Philadelphia success during Rangers' manpower advantages. New York hadn't score on it 15 power plays against the Flyers.

Esposito said Duguay's first goal, scored after five minutes of play and six seconds into the Rangers' first power-play opportunity, was a key to the win.

"It was the first time in the series we got the first goal and it was our first power-play goal," said Esposito.

The Flyers' have not excelled while at a man advantage lately either — they're scoreless in 16 tries.

It was also reported that defenceman Jim Watson and centre Ken Linseman might be out of Philadelphia Flyers' lineup indefinitely.

The two were injured in separate second-period collisions Saturday with Barry Beck of New York Rangers.

Both missed Sunday's fourth game.

Garvey ouster goal of new football union

NEW YORK (AP) — A new National Football League Players' Union, rivaling Ed Garvey's players' association and aimed at ousting him from power, has been formed, The Associated Press has learned.

In an exclusive interview, Mike Trope, a player agent and the new union's principal organizer, confirmed the details during the weekend and accused Garvey of major irregularities regarding the 1977 approval of the players' collective bargaining agreement.

The new union (NFLPU), officially created several days ago, will seek a sufficient number of members to force an election to determine who shall represent the NFL's 1,400 players. It could also split the NFL Players' Association (NFLPA), founded by Garvey in 1963, into factions with 1½ years remaining on the current bargaining agreement.

The AP also learned that one or more players will take legal action against the league and the association, seeking to have the remaining term of the current agreement set aside.

In order to force a vote to determine which organization represent the players, Trope's NFLPU will need approval of 30 per cent of the NFLPA, or 420 players, not less than 90 days prior to the expiration of the current bargaining agreement.

Trope said from Los Angeles that he and several other agents with whom he is working — he declined to disclose any names — represent about 60 per cent of the players on current NFL rosters and that "I would bet my house that we'll have 65 per cent support within six months."

Trope, 28, who has represented 165 NFL players including star running back Earl Campbell of Houston Oilers, said he had spent the last month meeting with a number of labor lawyers.

"The fact is that the collective bargaining agreement (signed) in 1977 was not ratified by a majority," Trope said. "It received votes from only 453 players out of 1,400.

"And more than 50 per cent of the players in the league never received a ballot. I have this all in deposition form from Garvey. . . . In the transcript he stated this under penalty of perjury."

The deposition was taken in a players' suit against the league which never came to trial, Trope said.

Trope also said Garvey, without obtaining NFLPA permission, allocated $225,000 of its money to form the soccer players' union, which is also headed by Garvey.

Further, Trope said: "Garvey negotiated the current contract (basic agreement) in 1½ days and his former law firm received more than $1 million in legal fees as part of the settlement. "People think he doesn't get much money in this job. Well, he makes in excess of $125,000 a year."

By law, the NFLPA's role as sole legal representative of the players could not be challenged until three years after the signing of the basic agreement with the league. That deadline passed last month.

If the NFLPU is successful in displacing Garvey's association, Trope said he plans to go to Marvin Miller, head of the Major League Baseball Players' Association, or someone else with "a proven track record" and ask him to head the new union.

Garvey, in Washington, said ballots had been sent to "all dues paying members of the union and well over 90 per cent approved agreement."

"The courts also approved it."

Brave Brigade still bumbling

By Associated Press

It may be time in major league baseball to break up Cincinnati Reds and shake up Atlanta Braves.

Even another so-so pitching performance by Cincinnati ace Tom Seaver and the benching of Atlanta sluggers Bob Horner and Gary Matthews couldn't derail the Big Red Machine or get the Bumbling Brave Brigade untracked Sunday.

The result, thanks to George Foster's tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning, was a 5-3 Cincinnati triumph, the 10th in 11 games for the fast-starting Reds — including seven of eight from Atlanta — and the ninth setback in 10 games for the Braves.

Foster's third home run of the season came off Atlanta reliever Larry Bradford after Dave Concepcion reached on an error by shortstop Larvell Blanks. Dale Murphy drove in two runs for the Braves with a single and a homer.

Cincinnati lost third baseman Ray Knight in the second inning when he was thrown out at the plate and suffered a leg gash that required 27 stitches.

Seaver, who missed his first start of the season because of the flu and was shaky in his first outing last week, allowed four hits and three runs — two earned — in six innings while walking two and striking out five.

"My arm hurt most of the game," he said.

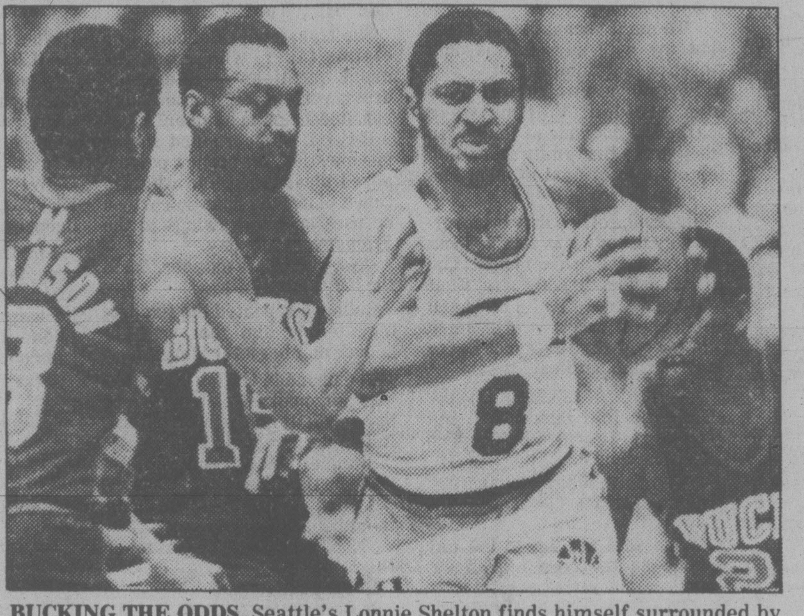
Sonics complete comeback



BUCKING THE ODDS, Seattle's Lonnie Shelton finds himself surrounded by Milwaukee Bucks after grabbing key rebound in late stages of National Basketball Association playoff game Sunday in Seattle. Eager to steal ball from Shelton are Marques Johnson (8), Bob Lanier and Quinn Buckner (21). SuperSonics edged Bucks 98-94 to reach Western Conference final.

By Canadian Press

Gus Williams sank four crucial free throws in the final 16 seconds to cap a 33-point performance as Seattle SuperSonics defeated Milwaukee Bucks 98-94 on Sunday to move to Western Conference finals of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The defending-champion Sonics, who fought back to even the series at three games apiece with a one-point win in Milwaukee Friday, won the series 4-3.

Seattle faces Los Angeles Lakers in a best-of-seven Western Conference final, beginning in Los Angeles on Tuesday.

In one other game Sunday, Boston Celtics defeated Philadelphia 76ers 96-90 to even their Eastern Conference final at one win each. The third game is Wednesday in Philadelphia.

Williams, who averaged 28.2 points in the first six games of the Milwaukee series, canned a pair of free throws with 16 seconds to go to put Seattle in front, 96-92, after being fouled by Quinn Buckner of the Bucks.

With five seconds left, Milwaukee centre Bob Lanier tipped in a missed Dave Meyers jumpshot to cut the Seattle lead to two points. But Williams was fouled by Marques Johnson with four seconds remaining and sank another pair of free throws.

Buckner missed a three-point field goal attempt at the buzzer.

Fred Brown came off the bench to hit four baskets and a pair of free throws in the fourth quarter to keep Seattle in the game after Milwaukee scored the first two field goals of the final period to go in front 76-70.

A 22-foot shot by Brown with 6:07 remaining, put the Sonics in front 84-83. A basket by Marques Johnson with 5:57 remaining gave Milwaukee its last lead at 85-84.

Two free throws each by Dennis Johnson and John Johnson shot the Sonics into an 88-85 lead, but a three-point play by Bucks rookie Sidney Moncrief with 3:52 left tied the score at 88.

Lonnie Shelton put Seattle ahead to stay at 90-88 on a baseline drive with 3:34 to go.

Shelton had 15 points, Brown 14 and John Johnson 13 for Seattle, while Marques Johnson, hitting just nine of 25 shots from the floor, led Milwaukee with 22 points.

In Boston, Darryl Dawkins scored three consecutive field goals for Philadelphia to tie the game, 62-62, with 6:21 remaining in the third quarter. But the '76ers could not hit another field goal the rest of the period, while Boston ran off to a 74-62 advantage at the end of the period.

Larry Bird had 31 points and Cedric Maxwell added 17 for Boston.

Philadelphia was led by Julius Erving with 24 points and Dawkins with 16.

Newberry's eligibility queried on eve of final

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Doug Wickenheiser and John Newberry are the two 18-year-old centres Victoria hockey fans have been waiting to see and, perhaps, compare with Barry Pederson, also 18, also a centre but no stranger to Cougar fans.

The first gathering of the talented trio was to be Tuesday night when Regina Pats and the Cougars meet in Memorial Arena to launch their best-of-seven series for the Western Hockey League championship.

But Victoria fans may have to be content to watch only Pederson and Wickenheiser, the Regina ace who is the WHL's scoring champion and most valuable player.

Newberry, the runaway scoring champion of the B.C. Junior League who was brought up from Nanaimo Clippers to play for the Cougars in the playoffs, may not be a participant in the final.

A native of Victoria, Newberry has been advised that playing in major junior ranks may jeopardize his chances for a scholarship at Wisconsin. He turned 18 earlier this month and has two years of junior eligibility remaining but has committed himself to the U.S. university for next season.

U.S. (NCAA) rules allowed players to compete in major junior hockey provided they did not sign contracts. John's father, Dale, said Sunday that Wisconsin's assistant coach telephoned Friday and said new regulations being implemented by the NCAA may alter eligibility requirements.

"We'd like to check it out further," said the elder Newberry, "because John would like very much to play with the Cougars."

John, who was scheduled to centre holdovers Brad Palmer and Bob Jansch, informed coach Jack Shupe of the turn of events on Friday and did not work out Saturday. It means Grant Rezansoff, who played the position for much of the season, will retain his spot.

Still, for Shupe, there was good news. Goaltender Grant Fuhr appears to be recovering rapidly from an eczema rash that kept him out of the last three games of the Western Division final against Seattle. Shupe indicated, however, that Kevin Eastman, who played superbly in the Seattle series, will start Tuesday.

The first two games are scheduled Tuesday and Wednesday. If the results are split, a third game will be played here on Thursday and then the series moves to Regina for games next Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday (April 29).

The Pats wrapped up the Eastern Division final in five games by defeating Medicine Hat Tigers 6-3 Saturday in Regina before 5,141 fans.

Pats, who trailed 3-2 after two periods but scored four times in the final frame, got two goals from Mike Blaisdell and Darren Veitch and singles from Darren Bobyck and Bill Ansell. Wickenheiser was held to one assist.

Steve Tsujiura, with two, and Brad Kempthorne scored for the Tigers, outshot 47-29.

A crowd of 11,000 witnessed more lineup changes during the 10-fight, 4½-hour endurance of full-contact karate Saturday at Vancouver's Exhibition Park than in an extra-inning World Series game.

Promoter Mike Gorval offered a variety of reasons as substitutes showed up in four of the 10 "world title" fights.

Canadian light-heavyweight champion Dennis Crawford, who scored the only knockout of the night, typified the confusion. Billboards said he was from Vancouver, the program listed his home as Abbotsford, and the ring announcer called him Mike McGuire from Surrey.

In the bouts, best described as kick-boxing, combatants wore eight- to 10-ounce boxing gloves, and padding on their feet to cushion blows.

Blizzard in first win; Ball on ball for 'Caps

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Blizzard, having lost their first two games of the season on the road, were admittedly apprehensive about their North American Soccer League home opener Sunday.

"We were nervous, there's no question about it," admitted coach Keith Eddy.

Much to the delight of Eddy and 22,000 spectators, the Blizzard dispelled the blahs with goals. The final score was 3-0 over Rochester Lancers, with goaltender Tony Chursky gaining the shutout.

"I think we were a little stronger today, but I still feel we're our own worst enemies," said Chursky. "We keep putting ourselves into trouble, giving away the ball in awkward situations on the field."

Chursky, a native of New Westminster, made 15 saves.

In other games Sunday, New York Cosmos defeated Tampa Bay Rowdies 4-2 and Washington Diplomats downed Dallas Tornado 4-2.

On Saturday, Vancouver Whitecaps defeated Minnesota Kicks 3-1, Houston Hurricane shaded Edmonton Drillers 2-1, California Surf whipped Portland Timbers 5-1, Tulsa Roughnecks blanked Detroit Express 1-0, Memphis Rogues topped Philadelphia Fury 1-0, San Diego Sockers defeated Los Angeles Aztecs 2-0, Chicago Sting beat Atlanta Chiefs 1-0, Fort Lauderdale Strikers downed New England Tea Men 2-1 and Seattle Sounders beat San Jose Earthquakes 1-0.

Vancouver celebrated the return of midfielder Alan Ball with an impressive win over road-weary Minnesota in a torrential downpour before 22,007 fans in Vancouver.

Valentine scored the first goal of the game and was a constant thorn in the side of the Kicks, who lost their third straight game.

Striker Ray Hankin also scored for Vancouver while veteran Ace Ntoelengoe scored for Minnesota on a penalty kick.

Ball said after the game that he was pleased with the team effort, his injured ankle, which had kept him out of action the previous week, didn't give him any problem and, on the penalty kick, he "wanted to get the shot high — and I did."

Valentine put the Whitecaps ahead in the 13th minute when he rammed the rebound past Lettieri after the Minnesota goalkeeper made a brilliant save on a hard shot by Steve Kember.

Less than two minutes later, Ntsoelengoe tied the score on his penalty after a hand-ball infraction by Bob Bolitho in the penalty area off a Minnesota corner.

Hankin restored Vancouver's lead at 35:10 on a classic three-way passing effort with Bob Lenarduzzi and Ball.

Ball made it 3-1 early in the second half on a penalty after David Robb was hauled down by Minnesota defender Bjorn Nordqvist.

Vancouver played without winger Willie Johnston, suspended for 10 days by the NASL for baring his bottom here a week ago against Seattle Sounders.

DAVE MICK
. . . turns it around

Jon Mahovlic applies the heat, then defending champ warms up

By ERNIE FEDORUK

There's nothing like a little heat to warm up one's golf game.

It worked for Dave Mick as the medallist and defending champion turned things around Sunday to avoid an upset and advance to the second round of the 31st annual Vancouver Island Open match-play golf championship.

The early heat was applied by Royal Colwood clubmate Jon Mahovlic.

The younger brother of Victoria Club assistant professional Doug Mahovlic, Jon played one-under-par golf for the first nine holes at Cedar Hill and made the turn with a three-up lead on Mick.

"He put the heat on me," admitted Mick, "and I thought I had better get things together."

Mick responded with heat of his own by running in birdie putts on the 10th, 12th and 14th holes. Mick also won the 11th with a par and wrapped up his advance by winning the 15th and 16th holes with pars.

Mick's rebound made it a good day for form. Favorites prevailed although losses by a pair of professionals and a former finalist might signify minor surprises.

The pros bowing out were Dan Miles of Port Alberni and Glen Meadows assistant Al Robertson. Miles, playing Cedar Hill for the first time, was sidelind by Oak Bay amateur Paul Harris, 4 and 3, while Robertson dropped a tough one up decision to Cedar Hill's Jim Cook.

Robertson also was three down at the turn, charged back and threatened to carry the match into extra holes when he sunk a difficult, 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th. Cook responded to the pressure by making a tricky four-footer for a birdie that earned the half and clinched victory.

Veteran Al MacLeod of Cowichan, twice a finalist in past years, bowed 6 and 4 to Randy Gallop, one of the flock of good youngsters coming out of Nanaimo.

Also advancing to next Sunday's second round at Uplands were four-time champion Bill Wakeham of Cowichan; brothers Sandy and Jamie Harper of Nanaimo; Gorge Vale amateurs Brian DeGirolamo, John Gee, Stu Holroyd and Dave Donaldson; Doug Mahovlic; Bob Beauchemin, the tour pro who plays out of Glen Meadows; Colwood pro Bob Hogarth, and Cowichan's Bruce Ogg.

Winners of next Sunday's matches will then move to Oak Bay for a double round — the quarter-finals and semi-finals — on May 4. The 36-hole final for the CFAX Trophy will be played May 11 at Glen Meadows.

ONE-STROKE VICTORY

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Chen Tze-ming of Taiwan won the $60,000 Korean Open golf championship Sunday by one stroke with a 54-hole scored of 214, two under par.

Powerful showing by city youngsters

VANCOUVER — Victoria youngsters turned in an impressive showing in the province's All-American Youth Bowling rolloffs held at Brentwood Lanes here at the weekend.

Victoria bowlers won three of the four tickets to the All-American championships to be held in Washington, D.C., Aug. 5-11. As well, three Victorians and Lake Cowichan's Darryl Tasa had to settle for runnerup honors.

Roy Wells, a 15-year-old in his first year of tenpin competition, emerged as the winner of the boys' handicap division with a 2,386 count, including bonus points and his 12-game total. Tasa was second with 2,345.

Mike Jacobs won the boys' scratch title after a sizzling duel with Paul Thompson, also of Victoria. Thompson led all the way until rolling a 190 in his sixth and final game to finish with 1,071. Jacobs closed with a 202 single and won with a 1,075 total.

Susan Norton topped the girls' handicap division with 2,229, beating out another Victorian, Trina Sommerville (2,186).

Cindy Gilder, 17, of Richmond, prevented a Victoria sweep by taking the girls' scratch crown. Unbeaten in all eight games, she scored 1,629 to beat out Lori Norton, Susan's sister. Lori's total was 1,512.

The bowlers will compete for $1,000 scholarships at Washington.

Livingstone triumphs

Bud Livingstone won all four match-play encounters Saturday to collect top honors in the Vancouver Island Molson's Tenpin Series final at Mayfair Lanes.

Livingstone, a 37-year-old Loomis Armored Car employee who finished fourth in the qualifying round, collected $200 after beating top-qualifier Bob Butts in the final 182-140 scratch and 214-168 handicap.

In the opener, he edged Phil Norton 220-219 with handicap and then went on to down Lyle Ferrie 192-183 and Dave Tabbernor, 199-177. Without handicap, Livingstone was nipped by Norton 194-188 but edged Ferrie 160-157 and defeated Tabbernor, 167-149.

The rolloffs were among the top 20 bowlers in a six-event series on various Island lanes.

Tip to Trevino trims Tom's margin by two

Times News Services

Despite a two-shot penalty assesed for a tip to Lee Trevino that was mentioned on national television, Tom Watson scored a three-stroke golf victory Sunday to retain his title in the Tournament of Champions at Carlsbad, Calif.

Watson, playing with Trevino in the last twosome, noticed that Trevino was playing the ball too far forward in his stance and advised him of it.

The information was relayed to a national television audience.

Moments later, a viewer called Professional Golfers' Association tour officials and questioned the legality of the advice.

"Jack Tuthill (PGA tour tournament director) asked me about it after I finished," Watson said. "It was a rules violation."

"I told him I accepted the penalty."

The penalty assessed on the 13th hole merely changed his closing one-under-par 71 to a 73.

Watson, the outstanding player in the game the last three seasons, claimed his third title of the year and 21st of his career with a 276 total, 12 under par.

The triumph in the event, that brings together only the winners of pro golf tour titles over the last 12 months, was worth $54,000.

It increased Watson's leading total to a whopping $201,525 with the season less than half gone. It also enabled him to move past Arnold Palmer into third place on the all-time money winning list behind Jack Nicklaus and Trevino. Watson now has $1,872,958 for his career.

Watson started the day five strokes ahead. Nobody ever got closer than three.

The last potential challenge died when Jim Colbert made double bogey on the 16th hole.

At Tallahassee, Fla., Mark Pfeil, who had never finished higher than 11th in a Professional Golfers' Association tour event, survived bogeys on the two of the last three holes Sunday for a one-stroke win in the $100,000 Tallahassee Open.

Pfeil finished with an 11-under, 277 total, one stroke ahead of Mark Lye and Bill Rogers.

At Orlando, Fla., Donna White birdied 12th, 13th and 14th holes Sunday to open a three-shot lead over defending-champion Jane Blalock, then overcame a nervous finish for her first Ladies Professional Golf Association victory in the $100,000 Lady Citrus Open.

White finished at nine-under-par 283 after beginning the day one shot behind Jerilyn Britz.

Hagler earns title shot

Southpaw Marvin Hagler avenged an earlier loss and earned another crack at the World Boxing Association middleweight championship with a second-round technical knockout Sunday over Bobby Watts at Portland, Me.

For Hagler, of Brockton, Mass., the TKO lifted his pro record to 48 wins, two losses and two draws. The first of those losses came against Watts in January, 1976.

The WBA has stipulated that the winner of the title fight on May 4 between champion Alan Minter and former champ Vito Antuofermo must meet Hagler.

In a heavyweight bout Saturday at Johannesburg, Gerrie Coetzee of South Africa threw six punches and knocked-out Mike Koronicki of the United States in the first round of their scheduled 10-rounder.

Vikings win Price Cup

University of Victoria Vikings defeated Gorge by the thinnest of margins Sunday to claim the Price Cup, emblematic of the first division playoff championship in the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

Vikings edged Gorge 1-0 on penalty shots in the final at Prospect Lake Park.

In other finals, Nanaimo City topped visiting Port Alberni 3-1 for the second division title and Saanich Braves nipped Lakehill Athletics 2-1 at Hampton Park to earn the third division crown.

On Saturday, Victoria Athletics edged Victoria West 2-1 in a Jackson Cup semi-final match at Royal Athletic Park.

Close misses and outstanding goaltending by both Ted Van Waes of UVic and Jon Iruretagoyna of Gorge kept the count scoreless through 90 minutes of regulation time and 30 minutes of overtime.

Gorge came close to scoring twice in the dying minutes of regulation time and UVic hit the goalposts twice during the overtime session before the match was committed to penalty shots.

During the first series of five shots each, in alternating fashion, Gorge connected for four in a row but hit the cross-bar on their fifth attempt while Vikings, who trailed at that point, made the fifth shot count to tie it up again 4-4.

During the sudden-death shooting that followed, Gorge hit the cross-bar for the second straight time and UVic made their shot count to capture the title.

Ron Sage set the pace for Nanaimo with two goals and Ray Clarke added the single. Kevin Hood replied for Port Alberni.

In the third division, Rudi Henry connected on a penalty shot and Curtis Olson supplied the other goal to lead the Saanich victory. Mark Jackson scored for Lakehill.

In Jackson Cup action, John Leier scored his second goal of the game at 72 minutes to provide the winning margin for A's after collecting a deflection off a shot by Dave McCaig.

John McGuire of Wests had opened scoring at 28 minutes when his shot bounced off a defender and curled into the upper corner of the net.

Athletics now take on Nanaimo City of the second division in the Jackson Cup final Saturday at 2:15 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

The Jackson Cup winner and Wests, who collected the first division regular-season title, advance to the Provincial Cup playdowns which begin in Victoria, May 3-4.

Retirement year one: tremendous elizabeth forbes

A tremendous experience!

That's the way Gar and Lorna Dixon sum up the past 12 months in southern France.

A little over a year ago, when Gar retired as Government House secretary, they flew to Paris, bought a Renault car, travelled south and settled in Cannes, within easy reach of the Italian border and of many places they wished to see.

Now back in Victoria, they tell you of festivals, churches, casinos, towns, white sand beaches and historic spots they visited.

They speak of the people "and their patience in dealing with my fractured French", Gar says; also of their different customs.

"French friends were surprised at our Christmas cards. They prefer to send Bonne Annee cards on St. Sylvester Day — New Year's to us.

"It is on that day too, the children set off fire crackers, not at Hallowe'en.

"On All Souls Day, however, immediately following Hallowe'en, the graveyards are filled with flowers."

Many retired English people live in Cannes and in small villages surrounding that town.

In fact, the Dixons say, attending service in the Anglican Church there is exactly like attending service anywhere in England.

Historically, they discovered, Cannes actually owes its renown as Queen of the South, to the English.

Back in 1834, Lord Brougham, Lord Chancellor of England, was on his way to Nice when he was stopped by a cholera epidemic and instead spent his winter vacation in what was then a small fishing village named Cannes.

In the next 34 years he returned again and again to that village and the English aristocracy followed him.

The Dixons even found two monuments to the Duke of Albany, a son of Queen Victoria, who died there.

In February, Gar and Lorna went to Nice for the Mardi Gras Festival and Battle of Flowers.

"We're still shaking confetti out of our clothes," they tell you with a reminiscent smile.

Carnival theme this year was the circus. Carnival King was a replica of a circus clown that towered four storeys high in the parade.

"He was burned in a people-packed area on the last night of the carnival, as a symbol that all sins for the year had been forgiven."

Many small places surrounding Cannes have their own special festivals at different seasons of the year.

In January, for instance, when the mimosa was in full bloom in the area, a festival was held in Mandelieu.

Floats in that parade featured out-sized birds, bees and other insects, all made of mimosa flowers.

Last fall, when lemons and limes were ripe a festival was held in the town of Menton.

Parade floats there carried "strange looking characters, from 10 to 30 feet high, all covered with lemons and limes."

Aix-en-Provence "a beautiful city on the Rhone" and Avigon "known as the city of the Popes" were both on the Dixons' list.

"In 1305, the Archbishop of Bordeaux was elected Pope," Gar explains. "And, as the situation in Rome and northern Italy was chaotic, he chose Avignon as the papacy's future city.

"He built a huge place, half-castle, half-fortress, as the papal palace and it is still standing.

"Avignon remained the Holy See for many years."

In Aix, birthplace of the world-famed artist Paul Cezanne, "hotels, theatres, squares and roads carry his name."

However, because most of Cezanne's work had been acquired by museums and private collectors around the world before Aix became a shrine to his memory, "the town has only been able to find a few of his early sketches."

Shortly before leaving Cannes, the Dixons visited Rome, Venice and Florence; drove to Marseilles and from there to Nimes "where a Roman arena built centuries ago is still in use for sports, rock concerts and operas."

They were in Arles ("the Van Gogh city") and at Beaune, in the Burgundy country, they visited a chateau where some three million bottles of wine are aging — including certain vintages used at Government House here."

Finally they drove back to Paris, turned in the Renault and flew back to Victoria.

The Dixons at home

Would they go back again?

To that question Gar gives a decided "oui". And already he has a tentative list of places they missed and would see "next time".

Lorna agrees there should be a return visit "some day" but not to stay as long as a full year.

Right now, however, they are both looking forward to doing a bit of summer camping in a trailer on Thetis Island.

Then, in October, they plan to travel to Ottawa, where Gar will finally receive his Officer of the Order of Canada honor, awarded more than a year ago, before he left for France.

Bits and Pieces: During the months they were in France Gar kept a day-to-day scapbook and diary. In it he placed pamphlets, folders, festival programs, hotel bills, car expenses, rail tickets — everything. Each day he also wrote a personal record for the book.

Weather encountered throughout the year was much like autumn on Vancouver Island. "In fact we never wore a topcoat all the time we were over there," Lorna says.

The Dixons got their Renault on what is called a lease-purchase in France.

The Renault people make two types of cars: one for export and one for domestic use, without pollution controls demanded by other countries.

Visitors, or foreigners as they are classed, may buy one of the latter while in the country, with two options. They have the privilege of turning it in at the end of their stay or of having proper controls installed and shipping it home.

The Dixons decided to turn theirs in.

And finally a bit of a shocker! Each time Gar and Lorna had the tank of that Renault filled with gasoline, it cost them the equivalent of at least $30 — and very often more.

Lizzie Borden was acquitted of hacking her stepmother and father to death Aug. 4, 1892. After her sensational trial, she told reporters, "I am going home and I am going to stay there. I never thought of doing anything else." Home was a gray, 13-room Victorian house on French Street in a quiet residential neighborhood in Fall River, Mass. Now it is up for sale. The price: $79,000. Owner Frank Silvia, 70, who has lived in the house 33 years, says many have looked at it out of curiosity. "But we've had a couple of good offers. Practically every day people come here to look. They slow down when they drive by and get out and take pictures. We even have them come to the door and ask to be shown around. I try to avoid that, though." Lizzie died in 1927 at 66.

Payette

Jimmy Carter's 81-year-old mother, Lillian Carter, in Paris for an economic conference on the employment of women, contends women with husbands should not work because "being a wife is a full-time job."

Where did Elizabeth Taylor Warner go this time last year to lose weight? She spent three weeks at the Spa at Palm Aire in Pompano Beach, Fla. For about $1,000 a week, affluent guests eat less and exercise more. In her case, the spa's regimen reportedly helped her shed 30 pounds.

British actor Laurence Olivier denies that he described the new movie in which he stars, The Jazz Singer, as trash. "I am quite distraught by the inference that I could ever say anything disloyal to my friends in this business or even make any defamatory remarks concerning any work that I was doing, either in public or in private."

Michael Spencer, former executive director of the Canadian Film Development Corp., is the first Canadian ever to be appointed a member of the Cannes Film Festival jury. The festival runs May 9 to 23 on the French Riviera.

Quebec Minister of State Lise Payette is probably wishing she hadn't said that many of the province's women are as docile and passive as the fictional Yvette in Quebec primary readers. More than 15,000 Quebec women gleefully latched on to the Yvette epithet as an excuse to chant and roar their no to the referendum question on sovereignty-association at a rally this week at the Montreal Forum.

Dear Abby:

Thirty years and six great kids ago, my wife, like Maggie, was a "never-before-mass-gal." She also believed that sex was dirty and sinful.

An old priest put a stop to all that nonsense. He pulled a book from the top shelf of his library and handed it to my wife with instructions for her to call him after every chapter. He also instructed me never to let two weeks go by without bringing my wife a rose.

When the kids were little, our family doctor wrote on a prescription pad, "One weekend, every six weeks, get a sitter for the kids, buy a bottle of wine, check into a motel with your wife, and treat her like a hooker. And don't say you can't afford to. You can't afford not to."

Today our children are educated, well-adjusted and independent, and I am left with a lovable, exciting wife. Thank you, Father Joe and Doctor Bob!

Christians Should Be Lovers

Dear Christian:

Right on. And so should Jews, Buddhists, Moslems, Hindus, etc.

Dear Abby:

This is in response to referring to bullfighting as "the brutal, bloody business of torturing animals for sport and entertainment." This is your own personal opinion, and you have no right to tear down something you don't understand.

I am an ex-lady-bullfighter. Bullfighting is not taught as a "sport" because it is an art.

After I retired from bullfighting, I became very much involved in humane work, and believe me, I should have stuck to bullfighting. I am the president of Feline and Canine Friends, Inc. — dedicated to the humane treatment of animals, and this is the most heartbreaking work in the world.

The cruelty that man imposes on animals is unforgivable. Laboratory animals are tortured and caged until the only peace they know is death. Do you think about what animals must endure so you can walk in leather shoes? Or when you eat baby veal? Or wear a fur coat? Check it out, if you have the nerve.

Rose H.

Dear Rose:

What you say may be true, but does man's inhumane treatment of other animals justify man's inhumane treatment of the bull for art.

Dear Abby:

My father died on the operating table last month and his doctor had the nerve to send us a bill for the surgery. Should he be paid for an operation that failed?

His Daughter

Dear Daughter:

Yes. The doctor put forth as much skill, effort and time on an operation that failed as he would have for an operation that succeeded.

How not to get stung when building

Last week, I told you about some of the play-safe rules that should guide those who venture into the tricky world of home-building or house-improvement. Today, let's take a further look at some of the pitfalls that lurk for the unwary.

Remember, for a start, that the lowest estimate is not necessarily the best. Find out what you're getting for that estimate and keep in mind the melancholy case of the house with squeaky floors.

The householder in this instance settled almost automatically for what struck him as a pleasingly low estimate. But when he moved into his completed house, it was to find a "canary" lurking beneath the floor of each downstairs rooms.

Rugs failed to dampen those squeaks. So did an amateur job of floor-bracing. It took professional attention, at considerable expense for labor and material, to get rid of those stubborn squeaks.

Early in our sashay into acquiring a home addition, we asked George, the builder-contractor, if he'd like a down payment on the job. George smiled, and shook his head for negative.

"Listen," he said, "you shouldn't have to make a down payment or an advance payment. 'Matter of fact, think twice before hooking up with a builder who asks for either."

"How is that?" I asked, and got a prompt answer.

"Because a man who lacks the credit rating or the financial under-pinning to take on a job without that kind of help is one to watch out for," George said.

One of the ugliest traps into which a contracting home-owner can blunder reveals itself when he discovers, after the fly-by-night builder has collected his money and lit out, that the sums he gave the builder to settle his accounts have not been passed on. Dunners from suppliers begin to arrive, asking settlement of accounts which the householder believed to have been long paid. Meanwhile, the dishonest builder will have made himself extremely hard to find.

To avoid any such grim possibility, certain safeguards should be employed.

One is to learn tha name of each supplier, and check with him as to whether the builder's account for materials (which, never forget it, is your account for which you are responsible!) has been paid. Again, as George pointed out, no honest builder will object to this checking-up.

And to make assurance doubly sure, when giving your builder a cheque for materials, make it out both to him and to the supplier of the materials being paid for. Write on it what those materials are. Later, that cheque will be your receipt.

Nasty? Suspicious-minded? Sure! But also, insurance of a very useful sort against getting stung.

By the same token, be sure to check with the subcontractors whom the builder has called in to attend to this and that. Have they been paid? Or are they still waiting in hopes for the cheque you gave the builder to be passed on to them weeks ago?

Incidentally, choosing your builder-contractor with a careful eyes to his reliability and good reputation pays off in various directions. One fo these is in the matter of sub-contractors, who naturally prefer to work for a fair-dealing operator who pays on the barrel-head. It follows that such a builder gets the best sub-contractors in the various trades and when you consider the number of specialists who will be called in on your house or addition, that can be mighty important.

There will be a roofer, an electrician and a painter. Also, a masonry expert, a dry-waller, a plumber, possibly a window specialist, and, oh yes!, a man to install your roof-gutters.

Let one or other of these fail to turn up, or do a slipshod job, and watch your costs mount!

While doing a precise job of door-hanging, George spun off a couple more warnings.

If, on checking your invoices, you should find an arrestingly large amount of any material ordered, look into it. It just could be that the builder is doing some stock-piling of material, at your expense, for another house which he has under construction.

You, as home-owner, will have a building permit in your possession which calls for inspections at various stages. Insist that these inspections be made on time.

At this point, I asked George whether builders ever got stung by larcenous-minded customers.

George grinned.

"Sure," he said. "A couple of times, I've had to take legal action to collect." The grin widened. "Say," he remarked, "did it ever occur to you that while you were checking up on me, I could be running a check on you?"

Vic High circus here via VDT

By AL FORREST

Three Vic High students entered the computer age when they came into the Victoria Times newsroom Thursday afternoon to publicize their school's upcoming fund-raising circus.

They had no written report on the event, just a few rough notes, so they were invited to type out a story on the video display terminals (VDT) used at Victoria Press.

Linda Low, 17, an expert typist, volunteered to write her first newspaper story.

"I've never used a machine like this, everything's so easy," she said.

She was particulary impressed that she could correct a mistake simply by typing the correct letter over the error.

"If we only had machines like this at school!" she said.

Making helpful suggestions were classmates Penny Chow and Karen Wong.

Miss Low has been specializing in economics and clerical skills at Vic High school.

Would she consider journalism, after her experience?

"I don't think so. It looks like a pretty demanding job — even with this machine."

Here is Linda's first-ever newspaper story written on a video display terminal:

By DR. BOB YOUNG

The elderly patient who has never known a serious illness and who refuses to accept his own inherent mortality poses a real problem for a physician. The family also is at a major disadvantage in this situation, and are usually at a loss as to what to do.

This is true in most cases, but particularly so when the patient has investments, property, or other holdings.

It is unfortunate that an illness striking an elderly person is often sudden in onset and frequently severe in its effect. Because he or she "has never been sick a day in my life", he cannot accept that he is now.

In addition the nature of the disease itself may markedly affect the patient's ability to think and exercise good judgement. Strokes, kidney failure, cancer, lung disease — indeed almost any illness can seriously impair brain function. Even younger people are aware how difficult it is to think clearly when suffering from the flu or even a severe toothache. This is compounded in the ill older person.

The physician and the family are then faced with a sick individual who denies his illness. Suggestions, no matter how gently made, that he get his house in order are resented as being either premature or made with malicious intent.

The doctor may convince the patient of the necessity of discussing matters with his legal advisor only to have the lawyer denied admission when he appears.

Increasing confusion may occur. A point may be reached where, even if co-operation of sorts is obtained, the decisions reached may be questioned on the basis that the patient was not of sound mind when he made them. A trustee may have to be appointed when this happens.

Should the patient die intestate, distribution of the estate becomes automatic, to a degree, and may not reflect the deceased's wishes at all.

If your mind is clear enough to understand the above, and any of it seems to fit, now is the time to do something about it, no matter what your age.

How about landlords who tie rent hikes to pensions?

leslie holbrook
the fourth quarter

"I guess the government shouldn't give us any more increases in the Old Age Pension," writes Mrs. R. S., Kitchener, Ontario.

"On April 1, 1978, I was paying $47 monthly for my little apartment; on April 1, 1979 it went to $54; this April 1, it went to $89 — an increase of almost 100 per cent in two years and a $35 increase in one year!

"Real estate people tell me this $35 is too high but when I checked with the landlord he said '''It goes up with increases in the old age pension, etc. plan'.

"Does this make any sense to you? My rent increases more than wipe out an OAS increases. I consider the $35.00 more a month outrageous."

Knowledgeable readers are invited to comment on the above.

Jackie Coinner, executive director, the Vancouver Volunteer Centre, writes: "Your Delta, B.C. reader says 'It does not pay to do volunteer work; the tax system discourages it'. Well, we encourage community services to pay or offer to pay out-of-pocket expenses to volunteers, such as bus fare, car mileage, babysitting costs, smocks or uniforms, lunch.

"We emphasize that if volunteer organizations do this they will be helping to establish an equal opportunity system. The people who cannot afford the expenses involved in doing a volunteer job will not be eliminated from offering their help. Many services in B.C. offer all or part of such out-of-pocket expenses.

My column about 50-plus folk getting back into the work force resulted in considerable feed-back mail. For seniors looking for work and living in communities not having a special agency to help them I suggest they work with local seniors' clubs and try to set up such an agency. Agencies listed in my earlier column might give you tips.

Mrs. K.D.G., Mission, B.C. writes: "Manpower said they could fix me up in downtown Vancouver. I live 50 miles away — a round daily trip of 100 miles and quite impracticable for me." A senior job-finding agency closer to home might be the answer — as it has proven to be for a good many.

See what can be done. Mrs. S.A. Crawford, coordinator, Senior Citizens Job Burea in Winnipeg (set up in June 1978) sends me these statistics: Job vacancies listed to January 31, 1980 — 2815; jobs filled to same date — 1438. Of the 2815 vacancy listings, 1259 later were cancelled because it became clear that certain types of employment were not what seniors wanted or could do.

Perhaps the Winnipeg group can find time in their busy schedule to tell other groups in the planning stage how it is done so successfully.

May cut crime

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The bar association, school board and justice department are combining forces to teach a class on law to junior high students. A special emphasis is put on traffic, drug and juvenile laws. The Officials hope the course may reduce youth crime rates.

Applique Alternative is easiest

By KATHY FARYON

When beginning quilting students choose their projects for homework, they are encouraged to try something small first.

It's discouraging to jump right into a king-size quilt for your first effort; you might not realize just how much time it will take and give up before you're halfway through. Due to this fact, we are always on the lookout for simple, satisfying items which will appeal to students, and others looking for quick gifts or bazaar items to make.

Here is one which is darling, and teaches many things: padded applique, simple applique, reverse applique and the easiest of them all — The Applique Alternative.

We called this pattern the Calico Lolipop Flower because the colors are so rich and vibrant. You can alternate the calicoes with solids or ginghams, and mix and match the green leaves the same way. It's a perfect size for a wall hanging using a single flower, pairs or groups of three. Try it for quilt blocks, the front of a tote bag, or make a picture using a sturdy wooden frame. You can also whip up a decoration for a jacket or skirt very quickly. Even as a cover for a picture album, this little flower can be used in a hundred different ways.

How do you do the applique alternative? Very simply, you cut out two of each pattern piece and sew them, right sides together, as you would a pillowcase, leaving an opening for turning. Turn, stuff, and sew the opening closed, then press and place it onto the background.

With this technique, there are no raw edges to be turned under. The whole process can be done by machine. The look is different than hand applique; it's three dimensional which is very appealing.

What other things can you do? You can add embroidery stitches between the petals. The blanket stitch looks very nice and serves to set off the petals. If you use three or four colors of red calico, for instance, and go around each with black stitching, it looks very smart. Quilt around the flower, stem and leaves using the same color thread as the calico or a contrasting color.

However you choose to use this little flower, it will be fun to do, fun to give as a gift — plant them wherever you like!

Patterns available: KF-1114: Calico Lolipop Flower. Complete actual-size pattern plus simple applique instructions, including illustrated directions for making the Applique Alternative. $3.20.

Booklets from The Needle Crafts Series by Search Press Ltd., London, England: NC-1 APPLIQUE — Handy, purse-size book with text, including color photos, and drawings by Joan Cleaver. Lots of photos, ideas and guidelines for dozens of simple applique projects. $2.50; NC-3 QUILTING — $2.50.

More stock up on freeze-dried foods

TORONTO (CP) — The president of an Aylmer, Ont., freeze-dried food firm says Canadians are stocking up with food because they fear world conflict or economic collapse will create a food shortage.

Milton Scott said his company used to get a couple of queries a week, but he now receives 30 calls a day from prospective customers anxious to stack their shelves with dehydrated and freeze-dried foods that have a shelf life of 15 years.

He'd given kidnapper big tip last Christmas

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Nudelman calls himself a "calm, peaceful, man."

But the 60-year-old jeweller, taken hostage during an attempted holdup Saturday, said he was rattled when he discovered one of the robbers was a young man who worked in a snack bar where he had been buying his lunches regularly for the last eight months.

"I couldn't believe it," Nudelman recalled Sunday

"I had always treated him well — like a son. I gave him a big tip last Christmas. He's normally a pleasant young man."

The incident began at Nudelman's downtown office at about 10 a.m. EST Saturday, when two gunmen surprised him and his son Sidney as they were opening for business.

When another son arrived with three policemen alerted by a silent alarm, the robbers guided the elder Nudelman from the building at gunpoint, and forced him into a police ambulance and drove away, pursued by 30 cruisers. The gunman also took three satchels of jewels from Nudelman's establishment.

Police soon cornered the ambulance in a dead-end street, but the robbers refused to turn Nudelman over.

Police gave in to their demand for a police cruiser and they sped off with Nudelman on what became an interprovincial chase, ending 11 hours later in Newcastle, Ont., 60 kilometres east of Toronto.

The incident ended when policemen shot out a tire on the car, captured the bandits and recovered the three satchels of stolen jewels.

The robbers were identified as Joseph Albert Smith, 22, of Montreal, and Leonard John Menzie, 23, of nearby Deux-Montagnes.

They were each charged with four counts of conspiracy, one count of kidnapping, one count of robbery, one count of using a firearm while committing an offence and one count of using a prohibited weapon. They were being held in Newcastle, pending a decision on where they will stand on trial.

Mortgage woes nearing an end, minister predicts

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove says the decline in the Bank of Canada rate last week may mean "the tide has been turned" for homeowners renewing mortgages this year.

The drop was the first since the trend-setting bank rate was allowed to "float" last month. Cosgrove says lower interest rates, plus the mortgage assistance scheme unveiled in the speech from the throne, should curb the rapidly-rising number of mortgage defaults reported in recent months.

Early indications are that the plan may be limited to as few as 7,000 of the estimated 350,000 individuals and families renewing mortgages in 1980, and opposition parties in the Commons believe the assistance is clearly inadequate.

But Cosgrove maintains the program will help those threatened with foreclosure and will bring some confidence into the marketplace at the same time.

"Quite frankly, one of the reasons why we didn't rush into billion-dollar programs was that the interest rates have been a bit like a roller coaster," he says. "We're hoping that in fact it's on the downturn now."

Cosgrove says cabinet should be able to agree on details of the program within a matter of weeks. Although the program is unlikely to be retroactive, the minister says people with mortgages coming up for renewal in the immediate future should have time to try to arrange alternative financing.

Cosgrove agrees that a possible separation of those two fun[illegible] worth a close look.

Meanwhile, in Brantford, Ont., David Clancy, local organizer of the Canadian Homeowners Association, said Sunday a 1967 federal government amendment making renewable mortgages possible has sold homeowners down the river.

"It's insane to have to beg leave of mortgage companies to stay in your home for another five years," Clancy told 60 people at a rally to protest skyrocketing mortgage interest rates.

The association, founded by Vivian Woolford, a Mississauga, Ont., car salesman who quit his job to organize the movement, has encouraged the establishment of similar groups in other provinces.

Clancy, a financial consultant, said that until 1967 all mortgages were set for a full term, usually 25 years.

"I know a woman who bought a house before the amendment was passed who has paid 6.5 per cent interest on a $35,000 mortgage ever since," Clancy said. "Next door lives a family who bought a house a month after the amendment became law, and their mortgage payments have more than tripled."

Clancy said the organization has called for a moratorium on mortgages expiring after last Oct. 1, a return to full-term mortgages and legislation fixing a maximum rate mortgage lenders are allowed to charge.

Larry Loving, Brant County's director of social services, told the rally that family breakups in the area are increasing rapidly because of soaring mortgage rates.

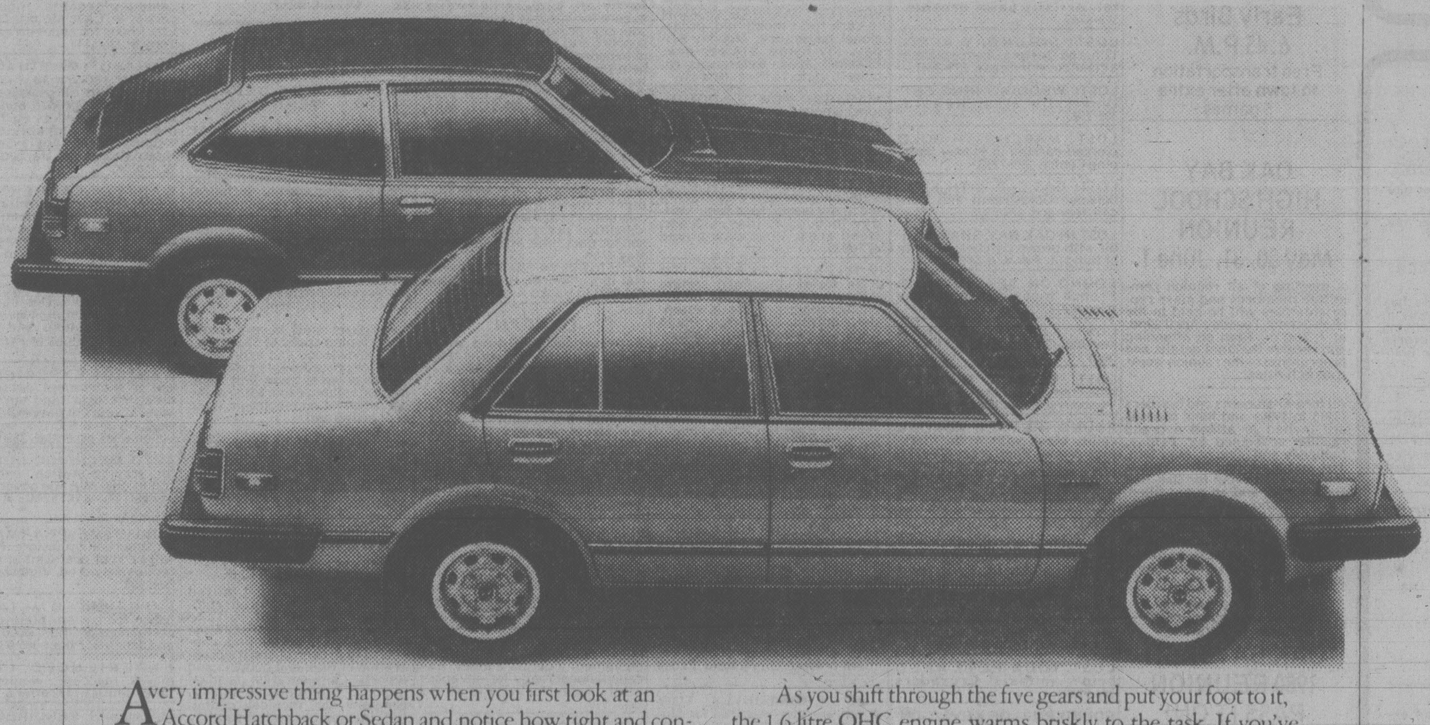
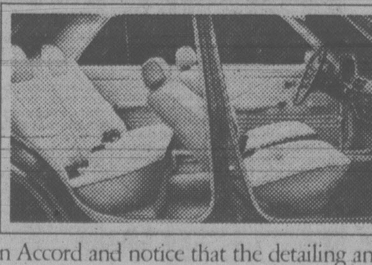
LOOKING AT AN ACCORD IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR DRIVING ONE.



A very impressive thing happens when you first look at an Accord Hatchback or Sedan and notice how tight and concise the styling is. And how everything fits into place. You realize that these are no run-of-the-mill imports or domestics, these are finely crafted automobiles, in the truest sense of the word.



The next impressive moment is when you slip into an Accord and notice that the detailing and finishing inside are as impressive as they are outside. With fully reclining bucket seats that are contoured and comfortable. There are thoughtful details such as a coin box on the dash for parking change. A remote control to open the rear hatch or trunk. And, on the Sedan, a remote control for the rear door locks.

But the moment that's pure magic, the moment for which there is no substitute, is when you turn the key, watch the tach swing freely, slip the Accord into the first of its five gears and head for the road. Because that's where an Accord is in its glory.

As you shift through the five gears and put your foot to it, the 1.6 litre OHC engine warms briskly to the task. If you've chosen the new Hondamatic with overdrive, you'll find the performance just as exhilarating, and the economy just as tight-fisted. Head into a corner and the rack and pinion steering holds a tight line. Drive over a bump and the independent MacPherson Strut Suspension handles it with a smoothness that contradicts Accord's concise size. Approach a stop and the power-assisted, dual-circuit braking system with front discs halts you straight in your tracks. And at any time you can glance down and the carefully thought out instrumentation lets you know what's happening when. It's a series of magic moments.

The next moment that needs consideration is when you price an Accord. Compared to equally equipped domestics they're priced quite low. Compared to most European domestics they're priced surprisingly low. So when you price an Accord, that just may be the most magic moment of all.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie
pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk
the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff

before me in the
enemies

with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in

Magnolia an asset

Magnolias in the gardens of Victoria may sound like a promotion story until they are seen in April. Two of the hardiest kinds are in flower now, the earliest, Magnolia stellata, is almost over but Magnolia soulangeana and its variety 'nigra' will be flowering for a few weeks longer, even a few flowers into May.

Besides these two fairly common magnolias, both of which bloom on bare branches, there are a few others locally which might be considered rare, and they have flowers in summer while the trees are in full leaf. There are also an odd evergreen magnolia or two in particularly sheltered and warm gardens.

The first to bloom in spring is a small tree or shrub whose flowers have narrow ribbon-like petals which are lemon fragrant. Wide spreading branches from the ground up keep the plant well clothed while it grows slowly to a height of around 350 cms over many years.

Two features greatly in the favor of this Magnolia stellata are its blooming at an early age and opening its buds before other flowering ornamental trees such as crabs, cherries and dogwoods.

A second commonly seen magnolia now blooming in many private gardens of Greater Victoria as well as in municipal gardens and parks is Magnolia soulangeana and its variety 'nigra'. Both are fairly quick to develop in growth, and also flower early in life.

Magnolia soulangeana itself, a hybrid of two hardy Asian species, has large thickly textured goblet-shaped blooms which are rarely damaged by late spring frosts. They are creamy white inside with purplish markings on the outside.

A great asset is the long blooming period spread over several weeks by the continuing development of flower buds on almost every twig in succession. As the leaves begin to emerge just now, blooms continue to appear.

This magnolia can take considerable space in a city garden. One at Kew Gardens in England spread to a diameter of over 12 m while still only reaching a height of 7 m in less than 70 years, according to the late W. J. Bean, one-time Curator of Kew.

The variety 'nigra' is a seedling of M. Soulangeana and inherits its growth characteristics, but is a lovely deep rosy purple on the outside of the flowers. The inside is faintly soft pink. When opened out, the flowers are worth studying with a hand lens as the ring of crimson stamens in the centre adds an extra touch of beauty.

The leaves, of great value to the plant in producing food, are handsome for the summer months, being a solid dark green with well marked veins.

Magnolias like a sunny spot and warm soil. It should be deeply prepared loam, or enriched with very old manure and compost to make it deep and moisture retentive yet well drained to prevent winter flooding. Add wet peatmoss for extra bulk when preparing for planting, which is best done either in April or September. A small magnolia out of a container is easy to plant, but be sure to prepare the soil for a much bigger area, width and depth, than the present rootball; and plant to exactly the same soil mark on the stem.

Watering in our climate may be needed from April on; a good soaking at two-week intervals to prevent the drying of the subsoil.

Mulch the surface by late May after it is well warmed, using old leaves from elsewhere in the garden or well dampened peatmoss.

Never cultivate roughly over the root area, for feeding roots are shallow. Work with a small handfork for weeding and roughening the soil.

Pruning is seldom needed. The magnolia is a splendid asset to a garden; give it space and enjoy its beauty for years.

Nazi war criminals may be hunted in Canada

By GLENN SOMERVILLE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan says there are undoubtedly Nazi war criminals in Canada and he will ask that an interdepartmental government committee be set up to find ways of bringing them to justice.

The Canadian minister said after an early-morning meeting Sunday with Austrian Nazi hunter Simon Weisenthal that both are satisfied Canada "is not and was not regarded as a haven" by fleeing Nazis when the Second World War ended 35 years ago.

But there is "evidence, in a loose sense," from written and verbal allegations made to Kaplan and to previous government members that some Nazis are hiding in Canada. Kaplan refused to estimate how many.

After meeting Weisenthal, Kaplan said he is convinced it would be possible to assemble solid evidence to use against alleged war criminals, but first it must be determined what legal framework exists for prosecuting them.

The former Progressive Conservative government published a legal opinion that since Nazi war crimes weren't offences under Canadian law, no action could be taken, Kaplan said.

"I'm not fully satisfied with that opinion and obviously I'm seeking to go beyond it," he said. It was Kaplan, one of two Jewish cabinet ministers, who asked for the Sunday meeting with Weisenthal.

The U.S. Congress is awarding a gold medal to Weisenthal for his contribution to international justice in tracking down Second World War criminals.

Kaplan said a possible course of action for Canada is to permit extradition of accused war criminals to countries like West Germany or Israel for prosecution, but more preferable "would be a domestic trial under our own system of justice if there were a proper legal framework for doing so."

Kaplan indicated that Weisenthal mentioned specific individuals in Canada whom he suspects of war crimes, and said Weisenthal wants to co-operate with the Canadian government if action is started against them.

Liberal governments in power in Canada for most of the 35 years since the war's end have never acted on rumors and hints of Nazi war criminals hiding out, but Kaplan said his reason for pursuing the issue now is that there is recent renewed interest as a result of the West German government's decision to continue tracking Nazis down.

Indian troops regain control of Assam oil

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The Indian Government was back in control of vital oil installations in Assam today but faced another bout of unrest from demonstrators who have choked the flow of oil for four months.

Troops and police Sunday took possession of the state oilhead at Narengi from 2,500 blockading pickets who were held briefly before being released.

The success of the operation was marred by a protest strike by oil workers angered at the police action.

Their decision to stop work appeared to rule out an immediate resumption of much-needed Assamese oil supplies to the rest of India.

Students originally mounted the blockade as part of a drive to expel 3.5 million migrant workers and their families from the northeastern state.

The students said late Sunday that an indefinite curfew imposed at the oilhead, near the state capital of Gauhati, would be defied unless it was lifted immediately.

Troops guarding the installations have been ordered to shoot troublemakers on sight.

The students said they would also ignore a ban on picketing and stage five days of sit-in demonstrations outside government offices in Assam starting Tuesday.

The atmosphere in Gauhati late Sunday was tense with armed police patrolling the city streets.

Loss of oil supplies from Assam has cost the government $125 million a month and has paralyzed the economy, said Oil Minister Veerendra Patil.

The students have shown no signs of withdrawing their demand that all immigrants who have arrived since 1951 should be deported to preserve jobs in Assam and safeguard the state's cultural identity. About 80 people have died in related violence since last September.

Long siege for Bogota?

BOGOTA (UPI) — A hostage released during the weekend by guerrillas holding 17 diplomats in the Dominican Embassy says the militants are prepared to stay holed-up "until December."

Costa Rican Consul Rolando Blanco, the 35th hostage released by guerrillas of the April 19 Movement, said the armed group was in no hurry to settle the 55-day-old standoff.

"They're ready to stay in the embassy until December, because they are conditioned for it," Blanco said.

The Costa Rican diplomat was released Saturday as part of the M-19's celebration of its 10th anniversay. But "Comandante Uno," the group's leader inside the embassy, said "there will be no more liberations" until a full accord is reached with the Colombian government.

The 10th anniversary Saturday passed without the expected violence.

MASSIVE SUPPORT for Cuba's Castro government is indicated by the number of citizens who turned out for Saturday march past the Peruvian embassy where up to 10,000 have camped in hopes of emigrating. Costa Rica has offered asylum to all 10,000 but President Castro did not answer the Costa Rican offer immediately or lift the ban he imposed Friday on flights to the Central American country. He did allow 32 of the would-be exiles to fill empty seats on an Iberia Airlines flight to Madrid from Havana.

Mugabe gov't declares amnesty

SALISBURY (AP) — The new black government of Zimbabwe ordered today the release of 9,000 prisoners from jails throughout the country.

The good will amnesty decree said all prisoners convicted of cattle rustling or refusal to serve in the armed forces would be released.

Prisoners serving jail terms of 18 months or less also will be freed as will prisoners with 18 months or less left to serve of a longer sentence.

The order was effective today.

In addition, prisoners with sentences of more than 18 months will have their jail terms cut by one third, the decree said.

The Union Jack came down in Britain's last African colony at midnight Thursday night and the new republic of Zimbabwe, the African name for an ancient kingdom here, was born.

Mugabe, 56, swept to easy victory in February elections supervised by the British. He was one of the two leading guerrilla chieftains in a bitter, seven-year war against the former white minority rulers in Rhodesia. That minority broke away from Britain in 1965 so as to preserve white rule.

About 1,000 prisoners have been released in the last few days from jails and the rest were expected to be freed by the end of the week.

Western premiers prepare joint appeal to Quebecers

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — The four Western premiers will make a joint appeal for national unity to the people of Quebec when the premiers begin their annual conference today.

Dick Johnston, Alberta's intergovernmental affairs minister, said the national unity issue will be given a high profile at the three-day conference. Other topics include the Constitution, grain handling and transportation, interest rates and regional co-operation.

Johnston said in an interview before the conference that most of the first conference session on Tuesday morning will be devoted to national unity and the premiers will issue one, and possibly several, joint statements on their views of Canada's constitutional future.

Premiers Sterling Lyon of Manitoba, Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan, Peter Lougheed of Alberta and Bill Bennett of British Columbia issued an earlier statement opposing Quebec separation.

Johnston said the premiers want to reaffirm their position and make the appeal directly to the people of Quebec now that the referendum on sovereignty-association is near.

He declined to give details on the message the premiers will deliver, although proposed drafts of statements have been developed.

Johnston said the meeting will be closed but a news conference later will give the premiers an opportunity to speak through the national news media directly to Quebecers.

In Montreal, a pair of public-opinion polls with widely-differing results have added a note of confusion to the Quebec referendum campaign

One, done for a French-language Sunday newspaper, has the two sides neck-and-neck while the other, commissioned by the CTV television network, has the yes side of Premier Rene Levesque well in the lead, perhaps too far to be overtaken before Quebecers vote on May 20.

Neither poll was great news for the federalist camp, where strategists have been counting on the yes campaign to peak early and fade.

The CTV survey, conducted last Thursday and Friday, had 45 per cent of its sampling planning to vote yes, 31 per cent favoring a no vote and 24 per cent still undecided. If the undecideds eventually vote in the same proportion as the committed voters, the yes vote would be 59 per cent and the no only 41 per cent.

The second poll, conducted between Monday and Wednesday of last week by the Institut Quebecois d'Opinion Publique for the weekly Dimanche-Matin, gave the yes side 41.2 per cent and the no side 40.9 per cent, with 17.9 per cent undecided.

Some Alta. RNs defy picketline

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — A union official confirmed today some nurses, members of the United Nurses of Alberta, are crossing picket lines at Medicine Hat and District Hospital and reporting for work in defiance of the strike.

Betty Hoffert, vice-president of local 70 of the union, said a "handful" are involved but the exact number wasn't known.

"How many are crossing at this point we don't know but we do know they are going in," Ms. Hoffert said. "Some of the nurses who voted no in the strike vote are going into the hospital and we're not very happy with them."

Last Monday 170 nurses at the Medicine Hat hospital voted 88 per cent in favor of a strike, slightly less than the over-all provincial tally of 94 per cent.

Third apology slated for CTV's ethnic slur

The CTV network has agreed to make a third public apology for a W5 program on foreign students in Canada which offended Chinese-Canadians and other minority groups.

George Chow told a Vancouver rally on Sunday that an agreement was worked out during the weekend between the television network and an ad hoc committee representing minorities from 16 cities, including Victoria.

CTV has agreed to air a 12-minute segment on W5 next season to correct the racially-prejudiced impression left by its Sept. 30, 1979 edition, entitled The Campus Giveaway.

It alleged that many Canadian citizens were being edged out of university by upwards of 75,000 foreign students.

Chinese-Canadians in particular complained that CTV's statistics were inaccurate and the network used film which showed many Canadian citizens, not foreign students.

It will be the third attempt by the commercial TV organization to mollify minority groups. Earlier this year, W5 co-host Helen Hutchinson broadcast a clarification of the program which failed to satisfy them.

Then last week after rallies were organized in a number of cities, CTV president Murray Chercover apologized directly for the program.

Province to finance Nicomekl road bridge

The provincial government has authorized a $1.23-million grant to build a two-lane bridge over the Nicomekl River in south Surrey, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today.

Vander Zalm, MLA for the area, said the bridge has been a priority item for 25 years and will ease travelling problems for residents of south Surrey and White Rock.

240 D The 1980 version of the 240 Diesel Sedan with manual transmission delivers an estimated 12 km/li— beating every compact, mid-size and large car listed in the official EPA fuel economy information for 1980, published September 7, 1979.

And the 240 D is the least expensive Mercedes-Benz you can buy. But for 1980 it has gained a healthy increase in power. And from its 1.5-ton solidity to its generous interior space to its impeccable finish, it is every inch a Mercedes-Benz.

Opening lead — two of hearts.

Not long ago, I came across this deal which was played in the national pair championship at Skytop, Pa., back in 1935. The hand received wide publicity at the time, because it was one of the first published examples of the ruffing convention which I introduced into tournament play at this event. The convention is now widely accepted, and is also known as the suit-direction or Becker Convention, as well as by other names.

The idea was a simple one. By making judicious use of spot cards in a ruffing situation, it became possible for a defender to indicate which suit he wanted returned when his partner ruffed.

I held the East hand and my partner, Waldemar von Zedtwitz, led the two of hearts. The actual situation was at once obvious to me. My partner had not led a club, though I had bid that suit, and the reason seemed to be that he did not have one to lead.

Furthermore, the deuce of hearts, supposedly his fourth-best heart, could not be on the level because my partner would not have bid one heart with only a four-card suit headed by the jack. So I read his low heart as being irregular and as a call for me to return the low suit, clubs.

Accordingly, I won the heart with the king and returned a club — the three. This low club return asked von Zedtwitz, after ruffing the club, to return the lower-ranking suit (as between hearts and diamonds).

Everything turned out as planned. Waldy ruffed the club and, in conformance with the suit-direction signal, returned a diamond. I won with the ace and gave him another club ruff. We got no more tricks, but South was down one.

The mechanics of the ruffing convention are very simple. A low card calls for a low suit return; a high card calls for a high suit return.

American consumers who are struggling to make ends meet in a time of rising prices and tight credit policies have at least one consolation: gasoline prices are dropping by up to three cents a gallon in some cities.

Gasoline analyst Dan Lundberg of Los Angeles said, "In city after city, the higher volume stations and the private-brand chains, which are trying to hang onto their traditional volumes, are cutting retail prices by one, two and even three cents a gallon.

Industry observers attributed the price respite to record high gasoline stocks, a sharp drop in motorist demand, and growing pressure on dealers to reduce profit margins.

Meanwhile, residents of northern Washington have been taking advantage of cheap gasoline prices in British Columbia while federal and provincial departments disagree whether the situation will create a shortage.

Pat Hrushowy, director of communications for the provincial energy ministry, says the number of U.S. visitors taking advantage of lower gas prices in B.C. is unknown.

"There is no way to monitor precisely how much the Americans are using, but our checking indicates we don't anticipate any problem for the next three or four months," he said.

But Tom Robertson, chief of the federal energy resources information department in Ottawa, said Friday there will probably be a gas shortage in B.C. this summer.

He said surges in gas consumption could cause short-term regional shortages and there is a reasonable probability that border-hopping by U.S. residents could make the difference.

Robertson said that in the 12 months ending in February, the number of Americans entering Canada for the day increased by 44 per cent in B.C., 82 per cent in Ontario, 57.5 per cent in Alberta and 30 per cent in Quebec.

Hrushowy disagreed with Robertson, saying he is from a statistics branch of the federal energy ministry and not the information chief.

"It is an inaccurate interpretation of facts by someone not qualified to comment," he said.

While B.C. gas stations are reaping the bonanza in added U.S. business, some service station operators south of the border are unhappy.

At Blaine, Wash., about 50 kilometres south of Vancouver, business is down 60 to 75 per cent at one gas station.

Jackque Fower, owner of the station, said Thursday was the low point of her business career.

"This young guy comes in and buys 27 cents worth of gas so he can crawl over the border to gas up in Canada," she said. "Everyone is hurting here."

The Americans are filling their tanks at service stations in the White Rock and Abbotsford areas just north of the border.

Tolmie school deal set

The provincial government has come through with $1.9 million just in time to keep an arranged shuffle of buildings between the Greater Victoria School Board and Camosun College from falling through.

The money will be used by the school board for renovation of the old Tolmie school.

The school will be the board's new administrative centre and the board will vacate the building it now uses for that purpose and turn it over to Camosun College.

The board's current administrative centre is in a building adjacent to the college's Lansdowne campus.

Recently the board had suggested it might back out of the deal if the ministry of education didn't make available the funds it had promised.

Although Camosun College needs the space, the school board will not gain anything in the move, trustees pointed out.

It's the board's intention to have the renovation work go to tender by the end of September with the work to be completed by September 1981.

365 at ex-service women's reunion

A total of 365 ex-service women from western Canada and Washington state attended a 24th annual reunion banquet in the Wharf Street clubrooms of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans of Canada on Saturday.

The event, which had been in the planning stage for the past two years, was arranged under the chairmanship of Charlotte Bartlett.

Marg Mavor, president of the permanent reunion committee, announced plans for the 1981 and 1982 reunions, which will be held in Revelstoke and Richmond.

CRD mails out traffic survey

One thousand residents of the Capital Regional District have received a survey in the mail asking how they get around the Victoria area and why.

Victoria Ald. John Cooper said the city plans to use the information generated by the survey as the initial material for its traffic task force.

The questionnaire, which was sent to voters randomly picked from municipal voters' list, asks if the voter uses public transit, taxi, private vehicle, car pool, bicycle to go downtown — or walks.

It also asks if downtown is too congested, whether there is adequate bus service or enough parking spaces.

RCMP 'dirty tricks' affair a nationwide fizzle

OTTAWA (CP) — A nationwide "dirty tricks" campaign conducted by the RCMP security service against suspected subversives in the early 1970s often failed to achieve its purpose of disrupting the groups, evidence presented to the McDonald commission investigating RCMP activities shows.

The tricks included filing a phony income tax return for a suspected subversive, sabotaging a car, making threatening phone calls and circulating rumors about an alleged subversive's mental health.

However, the campaign generally failed in its purpose of disrupting the groups. And the RCMP official who approved the operations told the commission they were to be carried out in a humane way that would not injure people or property.

Outlines of 11 operations — carried out under the code name Checkmate — were made public Sunday when the commission released four volumes of evidence given last October. Details such as the names of suspected subversive groups, individuals and cities were mostly deleted.

Today, the commission is to release testimony from John Starnes, former head of the security service, and other high-ranking Mounties about the motives behind the operation.

The evidence released Sunday indicated a special operations group was set up to try to prevent what the security service feared was the impending formation in the late 1960s of a coalition of radical groups in Canada — including leftist students and black militants.

The law proved to be an inadequate tool for preventing violence by these groups, so other means were necessary, Assistant RCMP commissioner S.V.L. Chisholm told the commission.

From 1969 to the end of 1973, the security service carried out disruptive tactics across Canada, except in Quebec, under the code names Tent Peg, Oddball and Checkmate.

The purpose was to create confusion within the ranks of alleged subversive groups, discredit their leadership and create so much inner turmoil that the groups would be unable to carry out their plans, Chisholm said.

But the requirement that people not be injured hampered operations. Chisholm approved a plan to snatch a box containing files on members of a secret organization from a suspected subversive, but an area commander vetoed it because he was afraid the owner of the box would get hurt in the scuffle.

The evidence released Sunday was the first indication that the security service regularly conducted "dirty tricks" outside Quebec. The rationale there was the fight against FLQ terrorism —Filing an income tax return in the name of an alleged subversive in hopes of triggering an income tax investigation. The national revenue department launched a probe but the RCMP got no information from it.

Checkmate operations included:

—Putting chemicals in the gas tank of a car to make it stall so the driver would seek a ride in an informer's vehicle, which was bugged. The plan failed because the suspected subversive's car started anyway.

—Suggesting that a suspected foreign agent be given Canadian citizenship after years of withholding security clearance. The sudden approval was to create a suspicion in the minds of the new Canadian's foreign "bosses" that he had become a police informer.

—Making threatening phone calls which eventually convinced the target to flee the country.

—Circulating letters questioning the mental health of John Riddell, then leader of a Trotskyite movement called the League for Socialist Action. However, the letters were dismissed within the movement as the work of police agents, the evidence showed.

Macmillan of Canada dissolved in merger

TORONTO (CP) — The Macmillan Co. of Canada Ltd. — publishers of such respected national authors as Alice Munro and E. J. Pratt — will cease operations July 31 and merge with Gage Educational Publishing Ltd. of Agincourt, according to a company press release.

A few of Macmillan's 80 employees will be offered jobs with Gage and the rest laid off.

Maclean-Hunter Ltd., the communications conglomerate and major shareholder in Macmillan, had been openly dissatisfied with Macmillan's performance.

Douglas Gibson, Macmillan's editorial director said: "We've published great and lasting figures.

"But it was hard for any publisher to earn the sort of money that large corporate conglomerates expect."

Alcohol, tobacco taxes up?

It's six to one he's the dad!

LONDON (UPI) — A society beauty who didn't know which of six men fathered her baby invited all six to the christening and named the infant after all of them.

Harold Brooks-Baker, the American managing editor of Debrett's Peerage, a genealogical reference book of British aristocracy, says he attended the not-your-usual christening and was making his revelation to show how standards are changing.

The Peerage editor didn't name the society beauty or the six men but supplied some delicious hints.

She is the daughter of an English peer who is not a household name, is in her 20s, attractive and "wayward."

The six men are young, eligible bachelors from the upper middle class. One is the son of a peer.

The six stood around the baptismal font, flanking the proud and happy mother at the christening.

Each man was made a godfather and each contributed one name to the baby boy's Christian names. For a surname he was given his maternal grandmother's maiden name.

Years ago, he said, a family would have solved the unwed mother problem by silence and secrecy and sending the baby off to a nurse in Switzerland.

But times have so changed that this girl's family decided on an "aristocratic solution" — naming the child after the six men.

Mrs. Timm spends hour with her son

Times News Services

TEHRAN, Iran — The mother of hostage Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening spent nearly an hour with her son today inside the American Embassy in the first visit by a relative with any of the captives.

But in a last-minute reversal the militant captors barred Sgt. Hermening's stepfather, Kenneth Timm, from visiting the 20-year-old hostage.

Islamic Judge Sheikh Sadegh Khalkhali, meanwhile, called for the release of Hermening "to show our goodwill toward the American people."

"Everything went normally," the spokesman said when he was asked to describe the meeting with Mrs. Timm's and her son.

The Timm's attorney, Carl Mcafee, who stayed in the hotel while the couple went inside the embassy, said he had no prior confirmation the Timms would see their son.

Militant representatives first took the Timms on a round of sites significant in the struggle against the shah's regime, including Cemetery of Martyrs.

In other developments Ayatollah Khomeini delivered a warning to resisting university students today as pitched battles continued on college campuses across Iran for the fourth successive day.

Khomeini told chanting supporters outside his home that he backs demands by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and the ruling Revolutionary Council for a shutdown of political party headquarters in universities and a purge of anti-Islamic elements.

His appeal came after bloody fighting erupted on the Tehran University campus between students and a crowd of Khomeini supporters. At least one person, a female student, was reported killed in the stone-throwing, club-swinging fray.

Iran suspended oil shipments to Japan today because of its refusal to meet Tehran's demand for higher prices, a Japanese trading company said in Tokyo.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Masayoshi Ito told reporters that Japan would dip into its 90-day stockpile.

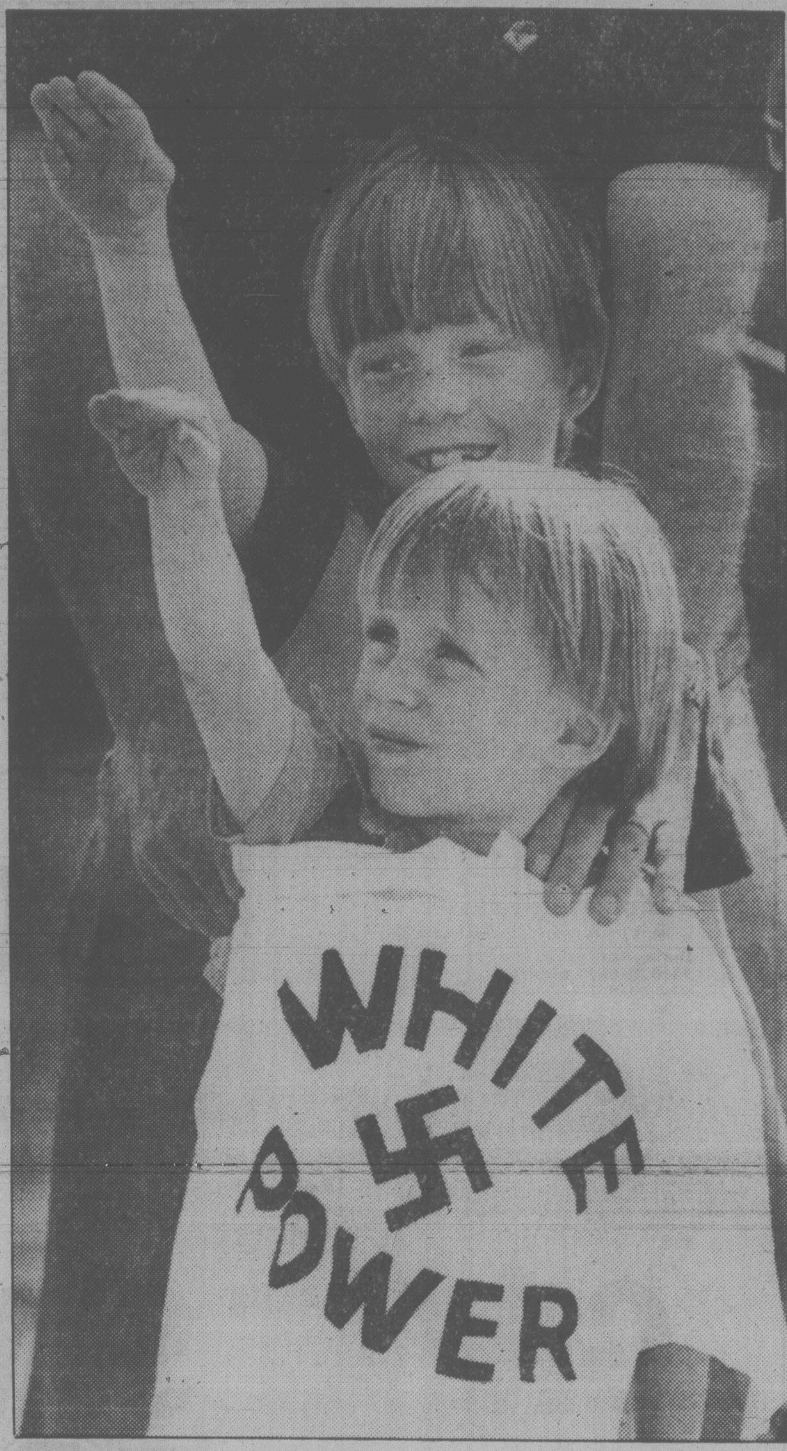
City police nab Alta. fugitive

A most-wanted fugitive — prison-breaker Kimri Arthur Edward Dial — was arrested by Victoria police Sunday night after a routine inquiry on automobile registration.

A patrol officer became curious about an unfamiliar Alberta licence plate parked at a Chambers Street address and radioed for its registered owner's name and address.

His inquiry was forwarded through the computerized Canadian Police Information Centre in Ottawa where it was listed for location in connection with a penitentiary break at Drumheller, Alta., about two weeks ago.

Police went to the door of the residence where they found Dial, one of the escapers, who had been serving a five-year sentence for assault, dangerous use of a firearm and possession of stolen property.



WHITE POWER salute is given by these two boys at a weekend North Carolina rally attended by Nazis, Ku Klux Klansmen and right-wing sympathizers. In a weekend marked by racial strife, three Klansmen were charged with shooting four black women in Tennessee and, in England, a thousand neo-Nazi National Front supporters marched through a London borough Sunday as 4,000 police stood guard. Meanwhile, in Washington, Canada's Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan says there are undoubtedly Nazi war criminals in Canada and he will try to find ways to bring them to justice (see page 36).

Turkey farmers bid to buy plant

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A majority of B.C.'s turkey farmers have agreed to put up $250,000 to buy the financially-troubled Maplewood poultry processing plant that closed Friday at Clearbrook.

The plant closed after the federal Foreign Investment Review Board disallowed sale of the company to U.S.-based Cargill Grain, which already owns Panco Poultry.

Thirty-eight of the province's 51 turkey producers met during the weekend, with 30 committing themselves to $5,000 and some to $10,000 each, to form a company to buy the Clearwood plant.

The growers plan to meet Maplewood owner Bryan Hambley Tuesday to find out if he wants to sell.

"We will then be meeting with Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt later in the week to find out how committed the government is to help any new buyer," Welch said.

Hambley said the plant would be closed for at least a week while he examined the offer. About 135 employees have been laid off.

Meanwhile, Vancouver Island egg producers are concerned the closure of the Clearbrook plant or any shift to all-turkey production will put unwanted pressure on the company's Colwood plant.

Lorne Jack, president of the 21-member V.I. Egg Producers Association, said he is worried that if there are too many chickens to be handled by the plant, egg producers will have difficulty getting rid of their spent fowl — hens that have completed their optimum egg production cycle.

"Fowl are a second-class product," Jack said, "and they get second-class treatment."

He said there are 300,000 such fowl that must be disposed of every year.

Les Guy, manager of Maplewood's plant on Sooke Road, said he isn't sure what Jack is worried about.

"Our policy has been that we pretty well kill all Island fowl," Guy said. "We haven't refused to kill any."

Excise punch expected by MacEachen tonight

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians may face higher taxes on alcohol and tobacco this week following an economic statement by Finance Minister Allan MacEachen to be made tonight in the Commons.

The finance department is refusing to call it a budget, although it is expected MacEachen will go ahead with some revenue-raising measures and other housekeeping details contained in the defeated budget of the former Conservative government.

There are also some measures still outstanding from the November, 1978, budget of former Liberal finance minister Jean Chretien.

The defeated budget of former finance minister John Crosbie raised taxes on cigarettes, alcohol and businesses in addition to the controversial four-cent-a-litre (18-cent-a-gallon) rise in the excise tax on gasoline.

Although the taxes were applied immediately, they were rescinded because of the defeat of the budget and dissolution of Parliament for the Feb. 18 election.

The Liberals promised during the election campaign the gasoline excise tax would not be raised, but they made no promises regarding other tax increases.

The higher tobacco taxes — about 2.7 cents more on a package of 20 cigarettes — would raise about $85 million this year.

Higher alcohol taxes — about one cent on a bottle of beer, 11 cents on spirits and 13 cents on wines — would have raised $130 million this year.

A temporary five-per-cent corporate surtax until the end of 1981 was estimated to raise $370 million this year and $510 million next year.

The government is looking for new ways to raise more revenue mainly because higher costs of subsidizing imported oil have pushed the deficit well beyond the $11.3 billion originally forecast last year.

MacEachen's 3,300-word statement, his first formal announcement since getting the portfolio, is expected to make projections on such things as economic growth and the government's spending deficit this year.

The announcement was timed to come a day before the release of spending estimates for the year ending March, 1981.

Release of these figures is about two months behind schedule because of the Feb. 18 election.

RCMP tricksters may be revealed

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan said Monday he would consider giving the names of RCMP officers involved in possibly illegal dirty tricks if asked for them by provincial attorneys-general.

(See earlier RCMP tricks story page 40.)

The minister told reporters he has advised the attorneys-general of British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec that disruptive operations described in transcripts of testimony taken by the McDonald commission into RCMP wrongdoing occurred in their provinces.

He told his provincial counterparts of the transcripts in advance of their release Sunday. Most identifying details were removed from the edited transcripts given the press.

Attorneys-general would be responsible for laying charges against any officers who broke the law while participating in the dirty tricks campaign conducted by the RCMP security forces in the 1970s.

The transcripts revealed such tricks as filing a phoney income tax return, sabotaging a car and making threatening telephone calls.

Kaplan said charges that might result should wait for the McDonald Commission's report. The report is expected to include recommendations on whether disciplinary action should be taken against officers who broke the law. It is expected by the end of the summer, he said.

In another announcement, Kaplan said Monday he has ordered a review to determine how much abuse there is in the parole system.

L.A. Games for sure

Times News Services

The International Olympic Committee will support holding the 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles whatever the outcome of the U.S.-inspired boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

IOC President Lord Killanin Sunday in Geneva downplayed speculation that the U.S. withdrawal from the Moscow Olympics on President Carter's orders would lead the IOC to suspend the U.S. Olympic Committee for bowing to political pressure. Such a suspension would automatically invalidate the contract for the 1984 Games.

Several members of the Moscow Organizing Committee have said in recent weeks that Los Angeles risked losing the Games because of the U.S. boycott drive.

And the Soviet Union was expected to open a campaign today to have the U.S. Olympic Committee suspended from the Olym-

BCRIC eyes total control of CanCel

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. announced plans Sunday to offer to purchase all of the publicly-held common shares of Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., a B.C.-based pulp and lumber producer.

BCRIC president David Helliwell said the corporation will pay $15 for each of the approximately 2.4 million publicly-held shares which closed Friday on the Toronto Stock Exchange at $10.12. BCRIC currently owns 81 per cent of CanCel's shares.

TSE Trading in shares of BCRIC and CanCel, was halted at the opening and resumed at 1 p.m. EST. BCRIC shares gained ¼ to $6⅝ on 58,000 shares and Canadian Cellulose jumped 4 to $14⅛ on 700 shares.

Helliwell expects the offer will be mailed in early May and will be conditional upon obtaining at least 90 per cent of the outstanding shares.

"We believe the price being offered is appropriate both for BCRIC and for the other CanCel shareholders," he said. "We have engaged an independent valuation which supports $15 as a fair price for the CanCel shareholders.

"From BCRIC's standpoint, obtaining 100-per-cent ownership of CanCel is consistent with our operating company objectives. It will complement our 100-per-cent ownership of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills and enable us to undertake an effective rationalization and integration of these operations, particularly in terms of the available forest resource."

Helliwell said the offer will also allow CanCel to accelerate plans for a major expansion of its Castlegar pulp mill which might otherwise be delayed because of limited financing options.

CanCel president Donald Watson said his initial reaction to the offer is positive.

Watson said CanCel's board of directors will formally consider the offer as soon as possible after it is made. He also said the company's annual shareholders' meeting will be held April 25 in Vancouver as previously scheduled.

BCRIC recently purchased 14 per cent of the shares of forest giant MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. for $35 a share and took an option on 25 per cent of the shares of Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Royal planning U.S. expansion

MONTREAL (CP) — The United States is the No. 1 target in the Royal Bank's international expansion, Rowland Frazee, chairman and chief executive officer, said Wednesday.

The Royal has operated in the U.S. since 1899 but is not happy with its past performance, Frazee said in a speech to the Montreal Society of Financial Analysts.

It is injecting $100 million of new capital into its chief U.S. subsidiary, Royal Bank and Trust Co. of New York, and once regulatory approval comes through, this subsidiary will be among the top 80 U.S. banks.

The Royal has also completed acquisition of banks in Britain and Germany, and its London operations handled $10.8 billion in business in the last nine months, chiefly in Euro currency and bond dealings.

Frazee said the Royal wants to become known as a first-tier international bank, adding that last year the international division accounted for 30 per cent of the bank's assets and 34 per cent of its earnings. In the first quarter this year it has accounted for 43 per cent of earnings. The bank has representatives in 45 countries.
